Civil Rights Legislation Is Shelved For Session

Wherry Charges Truman, Leaders Play Politics in FEPC Test Delay

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday agreed with his leaders to put off civil rights legislation until next year and a congressional adjournment push immediately got under way.

Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) slated a fair employment practices measure for consideration shortly after the Senate r turns in January.

The announcement, following a White House legislative conference, touched off a drive to adjourn Congress in two or three weeks, following a clean-up of other "musts" on the calendar.

Civil rights legislation, which invariably collides with a Southern filibuster, previously had been scheduled as a session-end "possibility."

Agrees It's Too Late

Lucas said Mr. Truman agreed with his leaders that it is too late to enact any part of the controversial program this session. He said he doubted a prolonged Senate discussion at this time would be "helpful."

Charging "politics" entered into the decision, Senate Republican Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.) challenged selection of FEPC legislation for the postponed civil rights test.

He said anti-lynching legislation could have been passed this session or next, but the leadership deliberately by-passed it.

Most Difficult to Pass

Wherry described FEPC legislation as "the most difficult of the civil rights measures to pass" and charged it was chosen for that reason.

The Nebraskan was one of the authors of the new coalition cloture rule, passed early this year over Administration opposition.

"They could get cloture on an antilynching bill and they know it," said Wherry. "But they hope and pray it won't work on an FEPC bill, so they can go into the campaign and blame it on the rule."

The GOP leader hinted Republicans themselves will move to call up anti-lynching legislation next session if the FEPC test fails.

Lucas told newsmen that not

Hiss to Seek New Venue for Second Trial

New York, Oct. 3 (AP).—Alger Hiss said today he would try to have his second perjury trial transferred to the Vermont Federal District Court. It is set for April 10.

He said he felt he no longer could get a fair trial in New York.

The Government promptly replied that it would oppose the move for a change of venue.

The former diplomat also revealed that he had hired a new attorney, Claude B. Cross of Boston, to try the second case.

He said he wanted "to express publicly my deep appreciation of the loyal and valuable services of Lloyd Paul Stryker, who represented me at the first trial."

The former State Department official's first trial ended last July 8 in a jury disagreement with the vote 8 to 4 for conviction.

He is accused of lying in denying that he ever gave Government secrets to Whittaker Chambers, Communist courier, for transmission to Russia.

Top Admirals Criticize Pentagon in Letter Turned Over Surreptitiously to Newsmen

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Some startling comments by top ranking Navy admirals—picturing the national security as endangered and naval morale lowered "almost to despondency" by current Pentagon policies—came to light yesterday.

The criticism, contained in a letter from Vice Admiral Gerald F. Bogan and accompanying remarks by Admiral Arthur W. Radford, Pacific Fleet commander, and Admiral Louis Denfeld, chief of naval operations, was surreptitiously slipped to newsmen.

The former sharply attacked the unification program and called for a thorough congressional airing of present national defense policy. Radford and Denfeld largely confined their comment to statements that a majority of naval officers agreed with Bogan, supporting him chiefly by implication.

Publication of the unprecedented documents came on the eve of a decision by the House Armed Services Committee whether to go ahead with a full dress review of the Nation's air war policy.

The group has scheduled this as a part of its B-36 investigation and announced tentative plans to call top Navy officers to testify.

Comments on current Pentagon politics revealed

Defense Secretary Louis Johnson and top Army and Air Force Officials at the Pentagon are reported to have brought pressure to call off the hearings.

Bogan, commander of the First Task Fleet in the Pacific, wrote Secretary of the Navy Francis Matthews "through channels" expressing his "hearty and complete agreement" with the earlier statement of Capt. John G. Crommelin.

The latter, a veteran naval aviator, publicly charged last month that the Army and Air Force were teaming up to put over "unsound" defense policies emphasizing strategic bombing and dangerously curtailing our naval strength.

Bogan described naval morale as tobogganing because of a widespread belief that the country is being "sold a bill of goods" by some officials in the Pentagon.

Radford, Bogan's superior, forwarded his letter with the statement:

"Rightly or wrongly, the majority of officers in the Pacific Fleet concur with Captain Crommelin

Minton Wins Approval of Committee

Senate Group Votes 9-2 While Supreme Court Opens 160th Terms

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The Supreme Court opened its 160th term yesterday as the Senate Judiciary Committee approved, 9 to 2, the nomination of Sherman Minton as the court's newest member.

Minton did not appear in person but sent a letter declaring his presence at a committee hearing would present "a serious question of propriety . . ."

The new justice did comment on his stand of 12 years ago when, as an Indiana Democratic Senator and assistant majority whip, he vigorously supported President Roosevelt's plan to increase the court's membership—the "court packing plan," as its opponents called it.

"I Was Strong Partisan"

Wrote Minton:

"As assistant majority whip of the Senate, I was a strong partisan and supported the Administration. I do not deny this. The record was made and I stand upon it. I may have made mistakes. I likewise may have made mistakes as a judge, but I think no man can point to one of my more than 200 opinions in the past eight years and truthfully say it was characterized by partisanship of any kind."

Minton has been on the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago since 1941. He pointed out in his letter that he was unanimously confirmed by the Senate for that post.

Committee Reverses Self

Yesterday's committee vote came after Administration Democrats turned up in force to reverse an earlier 5-to-4 committee vote requesting Minton to appear in person. Only four Democrats then were present and all opposed the motion.

Yesterday three Republicans voted against reversal—Donnell of Missouri, Ferguson of Michigan and Wiley of Wisconsin. On confirmation, however, Wiley voted for Minton.

Neither Donnell nor Ferguson would say whether he planned to fight confirmation on the Senate floor where Minton appears certain of overwhelming approval. Acting Chairman Kilgore (D., W. Va.) promptly reported the Jury Blasts Light Crime Punishment

The retiring District grand jury yesterday criticized the light punishment it said Washington criminals were getting in District Court, in a statement before Judge T. Alan Goldsborough.

Bliss

Through its foreman, Henry N. Bliss, 61, manager of the Aluminum Cooking Utensil Co. here, the jury said it felt "harsher treatment of second and third offenders would tend to deter criminals from continuing their activity in the District."

The statement, which Bliss said was a spontaneous production of the entire jury, said "in some instances a defendant has been released on a small bond or with a light fine, and from the standpoint of a layman is turned loose on society too soon."

The jurors urged "that the fines, bonds and prison sentences set by the courts in criminal cases be as severe as possible commensurate with the crimes involved." The jury, which has sat since July 5, handed down 65 indictments yesterday.

The Police Department, particularly the Detective Bureau, drew special praise from the jurors, who said "their (the police) detailed work and energy were realized by few."

Judge Goldsborough told Bliss the court had no authority to accept or refuse any statement before allowing him to read a prepared release.

In addition to a plea for severer sentences, the grand jury also suggested that:

1. Careful consideration be given methods of conserving the jurors' time.

2. Citizens accept jury duty if at all possible.

3. Congress appropriate enough money to augment the police force and increase the salaries of its members.

4. Crime statistics be carefully analyzed before their release to avoid "a false impression as to the activities of criminals in the District."

Bliss also commended the work of the district attorney's office in handling criminal cases.

AEC Reports Ample Supply Of Uranium

Output Will Meet Expanded Demands, Atomic Group Told

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

A congressional committee heard the reassuring news yesterday that production of uranium ore is ample, for some years to come, to meet all the needs of expanded United States, British and Canadian atomic programs.

It also heard, however, that the recent talks between these three powers on their future projects left unsettled the troublesome question of British production of atomic weapons.

But United States representatives hope that when the talks are resumed in about three weeks, Britain will abandon plans for substantial bomb production in England, in favor of an arrangement permitting it to participate fully in weapons work in America.

The report on the discussions, which recessed last week, was presented yesterday to the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy by the Atomic Energy Commission.

Committee Chairman Brien McMahon (D., Conn.) said after hearing the AEC's report that he was "personally optimistic for a satisfactory conclusion—a conclusion that will speed development of atomic energy for the defense of a free world."

He alluded, it would appear, to hopes for:

1. A virtual restoration of the full wartime partnership in atomic matters among the three nations, and

2. An agreement on the division of work among them for maximum results and optimum economy of talent, money and materials.

The three-power talks, which were held here over the past several weeks, were for the purpose of exploring a renewal or modifi-

Shots Hurt Three Miners In Tennessee

Two Others Missing; 102,000 Lewis Men Go Back to Digging Coal for Home Use

Pittsburgh, Oct. 3 (AP).—Bloody violence erupted anew in the coal fields today as the Nation's first doubleheader steel-coal walkout pinched America's economy a little harder.

Gunfire pinpointed a clash in Tennessee between union and nonunion miners with at least three hurt and two others missing.

This came at the same time as 102,000 of John L. Lewis' men streamed back to the pits, the one bright spot on the strike scene.

With 400,000 United Mine Workers and 500,000 CIO United Steelworkers staying out over pensions, the industrial snowball began to roll.

Great Lakes Dockers Quit

Dock workers walked out on the Great Lakes.

Packard Motor Car Co. said it will furlough 7856 workers Thursday and Friday due to "shortages already caused by the steel strike."

Railroads announced plans for laying off additional workers—and started totaling up their millions in losses if the walkouts continue.

Nonunion Man Killed By Virginia Rockslide

Grundy, Va., Oct. 3 (U.P.).—A truck driver for a nonunion strip mine, working despite the soft coal strike, was killed today by boulder rolled down a steep mountainside.

Sheriff Ishmael Fletcher said "we're working on the theory that those rocks were rolled down intentionally."

State and county police began a search on the mountain near Tookland, Va., and sent for bloodhounds.

Fletcher identified the victim as Walter Carson Compton, 26, Tookland, father of one child.

tle, Matt Bunch, UMW international representative, said 20 unarmed union miners were ambushed as they approached a nonunion mine owned by Keener Brothers.

Sheriff H. A. Kelly said he found blood splattered around near the mine but that everything was peaceful when he reached the scene. He has made no arrests.

Bunch said he and his miners were on a "peaceful mission."

Strip Mine Stormed

There were two other incidents during the day:

In Elk County, Pa., 8 miles from St. Marys, 21 carloads of pickets swarmed into a small stripping operation owned by Fred Eckert. About 110 pickets tore down a tiny supply shed and smashed a tractor.

The day's good news was for home owners who heat with coal.

Almost all the output of the returning miners—80,000 anthracite workers in eastern Pennsylvania and 22,000 bitumious miners west of the Mississippi—goes for home heat. Lewis ordered them back be-

U. S. Running Out of Money For Farm Props, Aiken Says

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The Senate was warned twice yesterday that the Government is fast running out of the almost five billion dollars set aside two years ago to maintain high prices for farm products.

The warning first came from Senator George D. Aiken of Vermont, ranking Republican on the Agriculture Committee. It was later confirmed by the former Secretary of Agriculture, Senator Clinton P. Anderson (D., N. Mex.).

Aiken declared that the Commodity Credit Corporation, which operates the price support scheme, will obligate its entire borrowing capacity, $4,750,000,000, and its capital, 100 million dollars, to carry out the current year's program.

He laid the blame on Title 1 of the present law that requires price supports for many crops to be held at 90 percent of parity.

"Rigid" Feature Criticized

"The rigid 90 percent support has got us into a good deal of trouble," Aiken said in debate on the new Anderson farm bill.

"It will completely exhaust the borrowing capacity of CCC before spring."

(The $4,850,000,000 price support kitty Aiken referred to compares with the total cost of Government 18 years ago. In 1931 the Treasury put out $4,091,597,000 for all Government expenditures.)

Aiken sounded his warning in attacking a provision of the Anderson bill which would extend the rigid 90 percent program another year.

He declared that that provision is virtually the only important change from the present farm law. Title II of the Aiken portion of the present law will go into effect next January 1, unless Congress passes new legislation such as the Anderson bill.

Differ in Effective Date

Aiken emphasized that the sliding scale of price supports in the Anderson bill (75 to 90 percent of parity) is almost identical to the 72 to 90 percent scale of the Aiken law. The main difference is that the Aiken lower scale would go into effect next January; the Anderson plan postpones it a year.

Aiken, who worked closely with Anderson all through the day's debate, pointed out that although he disagreed with the "over-all plan of Secretary of Agriculture Brannan," he agreed with part of the Brannan Plan—"that part lifted bodily out of the Agriculture Act of 1948."—the Aiken law.

He also agreed, he said, with Secretary Brannan when he quoted

Mrs. Douglas' Plane Lands by Flare Light

sion on the lung. The chief surgeon, Dr. John Alexander, issued this statement:

"Senator Vandenberg was operated on this morning, one half of his left lung was removed. His condition during the operation was excellent."

At 8:30, tonight after checking the condition of the patient, Dr. Alexander reported: "So far he is fine. I couldn't expect him to be better."

The surgeons declined to say what the operation disclosed, but they indicated a further statement would be issued Tuesday, after laboratory tests are made.

Senator Vandenberg entered the hospital a week ago for a checkup. Surgeons began their operation this morning shortly after 8 o'clock.

100-Mi. Gale Hits Between Matagorda And Freeport

Houston Braces For Fierce Winds; 10-Ft. Waves Pound Pier at Galveston

Galveston, Tex., Oct. 3 (AP). A hurricane loaded with winds above 100 miles an hour slammed into the rich Texas coast tonight between Freeport and Matagorda and moved inland toward Houston.

Wind in gusts of 75 miles an hour pounded Galveston, at the storm's upper edge.

Houston braced for hurricane winds.

The striking storm covered a broader area than had been expected. The base of its target extended 70 miles southwest of here to Matagorda. Earlier, Freeport, about 40 miles away, had been set as the southwestern end of the target.

Houston, about 50 miles inland from here, is the apex of a triangle expected to catch the force of the blow.

The area is packed with dozens of towns, millions of people and millions of dollars' worth of industry, shipping and farms.

Tide Running High

Winds of 70 to 80 miles an hour whipped Matagorda. The Freeport Coast Guard station reported a 7½-foot tide.

The United States Weather Bureau at New Orleans said the highest winds reported to it were 100-mile-an-hour gusts at Freeport.

At 10 p. m. (CST), the bureau said the center of the storm had reached the Texas coast near Freeport.

Winds within 25 miles of the center were estimated at more than 100 miles an hour by the Weather Bureau. Earlier, a Navy pilot who flew into the storm said he found winds as high as 120 miles an hour.

The United States Weather Bureau at Corpus Christi said it appeared the storm was moving inland near Matagorda than Freeport. Corpus Christi is 130 miles down the coast from Matagorda.

Many Residents Leave

As the hurricane moved in it drove trash cans rattling down Freeport streets. The town is 3 miles from the beach, and the road leading to the beach already was under water. The big Dow chemical plant reported at 10 p. m. that it was in snug shape. Lights in the town flickered.

A small crew was standing by in the plant, which sent more than 2500 men away as it closed today. Many residents of Freeport left

Kuhel Ousted As Manager Of Senators

Declaring "we just had to make a change," President Clark Griffith of the Nats yesterday announced he had released Joe Kuhel as manager of the Washington baseball team.

Kuhel

Griffith said no successor would be named at the present time. He said he planned to discuss the vacancy with several "prospects" in New York this week during the World Series. He declined to say whom he considered prospects.

Under Kuhel the Nats finished seventh in 1948 and eighth this year. The 1949 Washington team was the worst in 40 years. It won only 50 games, eight more than the 1909 Nats club.

Kuhel, who lives in Kansas City, was purchased by the Nats from Kansas City for $65,000 in 1930. He was rated one of the finest fielding first basemen in the majors, remaining with the Nats until 1938, when he was traded to the Chicago White Sox for Zeke Bonura.

He came to the Nats as manager in 1948, succeeding Ossie Bluege, who was stepped up to farm director.

Thinks He Has 'Criminal Mind'

Youth Confesses Breaking Into 64 Houses, Police Say

A boyish-looking 22-year-old was quoted by police yesterday as saying he believed he had a "criminal mind" after they said he admitted 64 District housebreakings in the last year.

So deft were the burglaries that many of the householders never realized their homes had been entered, police said.

The suspect, David Connors, formerly of 323 Emerson st. nw., is now free in $1000 bond pending action of the grand jury. Police said he calmly recalled the exact dates of most of the housebreakings, the address and descriptions of the homes entered.

Police estimated that about $5000 in cash, some jewelry and a few guns were taken in the housebreakings. Connors was quoted as saying he threw jewelry and weapons into the Anacostia River or down sewers.

Thirty-seven of the crimes occurred in the Eighth Precinct, five in the Tenth Precinct, four in the Eleventh Precinct, five in the Sixth Precinct and two in the Twelfth Precinct, police said. The remaining 11 were spread throughout the city and reported to the general assignment unit.

One of the homes which Connors was said to have admitted entering was that of Representative Frederick C. Smith (R., Ohio), at 3418 Carpenter st. se., entered last Tuesday night. The Smiths, who were out of town at the time, reported Saturday nothing was taken.

Connors said he "got a thrill" out of breaking into homes, police declared.

The youth was arrested last Thursday at the Haynes Lithograph Co., Inc., 1140 East-West hwy., Silver Spring, following a

Comic Strip Artists Lauded At Light-Hearted Ceremony

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

The Nation's citizenry, from President to schoolboy, yesterday paid devoted homage to the men who daily bring them their favorite entertainment—the comic strip artists.

In a glittering and laughter-filled ceremony, the staid halls of the Library of Congress echoed a tribute to the cartoonists by Secretary of the Treasury John Snyder as men "whose creations are awaited each day by more people than have ever seen a Rembrandt or a Reubens."

Occasion was the opening last night of the exhibit, "20,000 Years of Comics" in connection with the appearance here of 50 of the Nation's leading cartoonists to boost the sale of United States Savings Bonds.

Earlier in the day the cartoonists visited President Truman—and sketched him—at the White House. The President himself noted his devotion to their work when Milton Caniff, author of "Steve Canyon" and president of the National Cartoonists Society, asked the Chief Executive in the Rose Garden:

"Mr. President, do you want us to leave these sketches of you here or with the Secretary of the Treasury?"

"You don't think I'm going to let them out of here, do you?" the President shot back.

Caniff said that when the cartoonists met the President in his office to sketch him, they told him: "Our chief concern today was whether you were going to wear a bow tie."

"I thought of that," Caniff said the President replied—the Chief Executive wore a four-in-hand for the sketches.

Yesterday also the cartoonists put on sketching shows in Washington schools—and will do it again today and Wednesday.

An audience which filled every seat and lined the walls of Coolidge auditorium in the Library of Congress last night heard Acting Librarian David C. Mearns describe the cartoonists as "masters of communication."

"It is said," he declared, 'that they have 40 million readers a day. It may surprise you to know that in that respect they surpass the Library of Congress. It is no wonder that we preserve their work in 10,000 volumes."

The artists themselves put on a sketching show that kept the audience in an uproar of laughter. Then they repeated it for long-waiting crowds which had been

Russians Threatening War But Army Is Ready, Tito Says

Belgrade, Oct. 3 (NYHT).—The Soviet Union is threatening Yugoslavia with war, Premier Marshal Tito declared in a speech made public here tonight. He said that the Yugoslav army is prepared to fight to the last breath against any attacks.

He told 600 of his army officers that Russia is planning to make a "subject region" of Yugoslavia. "It is better to die in battle fighting honestly for truth and justice," he said, "than to allow yourselves to be tramped upon and to bend your necks like slaves and see the great principles of Marxism-Leninism destroyed without resistance."

"No one has a right, regardless of who it may be," to threaten such a country (as Yugoslavia) with war, he said, simply because the people of that country do not want to bear silently all kinds of insults and slanders but want to defend themselves with true facts.

He did not elaborate on his charges that Russia is threatening Yugoslavia with war.

Marshal Tito vowed that it was his "life aim" to expose the corruption of Communist ideals by the Kremlin. He made the following accusations against the Soviet regime:

1. Laszlo Rajk, former Hungarian Communist leader, was

Currency Devalued 46% by Argentina

Buenos Aires, Oct. 3 (AP).—Argentina today hitched her peso to the devaluation toboggan with a 46 percent cut in relation to the dollar. The government froze prices to prevent an inflationary spiral, and temporarily halted imports.

Argentina, first South American country to join in the devaluation movement, took a steeper cut than any of the 25 other countries which have taken similar action.

Hundreds of Argentines, clutching sheafs of foreign currency, jammed exchange houses in the financial district as the Central Bank announced that the peso, formerly worth 20 United States cents, henceforth would be worth only 11 cents in the "free market."

Exchange Trading Resumed

The banks resumed trading in foreign exchange for the first time since September 19, the day after Britain devalued her pound 30½ percent.

The stock market showed a downward trend. Buyers operated cautiously, apparently bewildered by the complicated new currency rules.

The "free market" rate applies to the transfer of funds for services, to tourists, and theoretically to the transfer of profits. However, the transfer of profits by foreign companies has not been allowed legally for two years.

Actually, the "free market" rate is controlled by the Central Bank, which announces ecah day what it will pay. No other rate is allowed legally.

Sliding Scale Established

For merchandise exported and imported, Argentina set a new and elaborate sliding scale value of the peso. In most cases the new schedule requires Britain and other countries which cheapened their money to pay more for what they buy in this country.

In other cases the peso was cheapened only a fraction of the free rate cut. This was so in the case of buyers using dollars to purchase edible oils, wool, hides and quebracho extract (used in tanning). The evident purpose is to draw as many dollars as possible into the country.

Meat, the principal export to Britain; wheat, corn, linseed oil and oil seed, will take a rate of 9.40 pesos to the British pound. The previous preferential rate was 13.53 pesos.

Edible Oils Rate

Edible oils now take a rate of 4.8321 pesos to the dollar against the old rate of 3.3582.

The free market rate of the peso was made 9 to the dollar against the old rate of 4.8075. The British pound was set at 25.20 pesos, comparing to the old price of 19.37.

In New York, foreign trade experts said the devaluation may effect a further drop in United States trade with Argentina. In the banner year of 1947, American exports to this country reached 680 million dollars. In the first five months of 1949 they were only $52,714,000, about a fourth of the figure for the same period in 1948.

The devaluation means American goods in Argentina henceforth will bear higher price tags in pesos.

London Hears

British Gold Reserves Drop Again

London, Oct. 3 (U.P.).—Britain's Labor government, with crisis piling upon crisis, this week will announce another big drop in gold and dollar reserves which may drag the total on hand below 300 million pounds (840 million dollars), it was learned today.

At the same time, a top adviser of Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir Stafford Cripps warned the British that they may face still higher taxation if they spend their money instead of saving it, and admitted there was a real threat of inflation and higher living costs.

Cripps will announce the new reserve figure as of the end of the last quarter—last Friday. At the end of the previous quarter, June, 1949, the reserves were already down to 406 million pounds ($1,136,800,000)—far below the 500 pounds ($1,400,000,000) which Cripps previously had set as a minimum.

The cabinet, meanwhile, prepared for a meeting to decide what to do about the Argentine devaluation of the peso and its consequent threat of an increase in Argentine meat prices.

Economic Secretary of the Treasury Douglas Jay told the annual meeting of the Westminster local savings committee that the degree to which inflation could be limited depended upon "how far the public are willing to save rather than spend."

"If the public's savings are not enough, only two alternative methods of checking the rise in the cost of living are open to the government, both of them unpleasant," he said.

The alternatives, Jay said, are higher taxes or reduction of building programs such as housing.

The threat of higher taxes is not a pleasant prospect for the Briton, whose income taxes alone take nearly half his wages. He also must pay a high purchase or sales tax on nearly every piece of merchandise, running up to 200 percent on luxuries like furs.

A chorus of bitter comment greeted Argentina's change of the peso rate and the combined threat of higher meat prices under the Anglo-Argentine trade agreement.

U. S. Uranium Supply Ample

cation of modus vivendi expiring at the end of this year. It provides for a sharing of atomic ores and an exchange of technical information.

The first half worked well and, it appeared from the recent discussions, will continue to. When all three nations laid out their projected programs, it was revealed that present production, mostly from the Congo and Canada, is as much as all three nations can possibly use for some years. This will be true even taking into account plans for much expanded atomic work.

But the second half—the sharing of atomic information—ran into difficulties within six weeks after the conclusion of the agreement, in early 1948. Since then, the exchange of useful data has slowed to a near standstill, it was learned.

Reason for Hitch

The reason appears to be either outright prohibitions in the American atomic law, the McMahon Act, or doubt in American minds as to what the law permits and proscribes.

After two years' experience, officials in the State Department, AEC and the Defense Establishment are convinced that there should be as much of a partnership in the atomic field as there is in all other military areas. Otherwise, they point out, there will be a needless waste of talent and materials, and a duplication of effort dangerous to all sides.

The nature and extent of the new partnership in sharing information and work, however, will be decisive in shaping British plans on production of weapons, American officials believe.

Britain Plans Indicated

At the beginning of the recent discussions, it was learned, the British indicated their intention to begin weapons production. British plans to manufacture plutonium, the necessary explosive, will come into production in a couple of years, and the work of making bombs could start at that time.

American officials, however, felt such work would be wasteful of effort and that the money, plutonium and scientific talent could be far better utilized, for the needs of both nations, by work in this country.

The talks were recessed before either side was argued into a concrete position from which it would be difficult to recede.

For Work in America

The hopes are that both sides can agree, however, on arrangements under which British and Canadian experts would work in American facilities, much as they did during the war.

The development of any such agreement, however, would require congressional sanction. Here the element of politics enters the picture. The British, it was indicated, will not be satisfied with any venture under which they do not get experience in manufacturing bombs themselves and at the same time end up with a less than satisfactory information-sharing agreement.

For, if a future isolationist wave should result in abrogating the partnership some years hence, they might end up without vitally needed know-how, gained either here or in their own country.

Opposition in Congress

Meantime, on this side of the ocean, there are strong elements in Congress which are antagonistic to the present Labor government in the United Kingdom and loath to enter into a full atomic partnership with it. The memory of British atomic scientist Alan Nunn May's dealing with the Russians is also fresh in many minds.

This attitude did not, however, emerge at yesterday's session of the Joint Congressional Committee, according to McMahon. A reporter reminded him, though, that some members of the committee, such as Senators Hickenlooper (R., Iowa), and Knowland (R., Calif.), have strongly opposed sharing "atomic secrets" with anyone.

They made statements to that effect before, but not after, the announcement of the Russian atomic explosion, McMahon retorted.

and with the ideas expressed by Vice Admiral Bogan."

Denfeld, who has not before indicated any support for this line of thinking, passed the documents to Matthews, with the written statement that he agreed with Radford's comment. He added that he agreed with a 1945 comment of Fleet Admiral Ernest J. King, that seapower is not afforded "adequate recognition" under a merged defense force dominated by military men unfamiliar with its potentialities.

"Naval officers," added Denfeld, "have faith in the Navy and a knowledge of the aggressive role it plays in the defense of the country. They are convinced that a Navy stripped of its offensive power means a nation stripped of its offensive power."

Copies of the documents, which were said to have been classified "confidential," were handed to newsmen by a naval source in a darkened corridor of a downtown office building. He stipulated that his name must not be used and that the papers must not be published until 7 o'clock (EST) last night.

Denfeld Called In

The Navy later refused to make copies of the correspondence available to other reporters. Officials said Matthews was "much disturbed" over the leak. The Secretary called in Denfeld and other officials for a conference on the matter.

Denfeld likewise was described as "very concerned" about publication of the Bogan letter and his remarks. It was said that the Chief of Naval Operations had intended his comment to be a confidential matter between him and Matthews.

Secretary Johnson's office said last night he had no comment on the release of the letters. He was said to regard the matter as a Navy problem. There were indications that Matthews had ordered an investigation of how the letters became public.

Latest of a Series

The incident was the latest of a series of happenings which followed Johnson's action in canceling construction of the Navy's "super" aircraft carrier last spring. Following circulation of an anonymous document, attributing wrongdoing to top defense officials in awarding large contracts for the B-36 bomber, the House committee started an investigation.

Cedric Worth, a naval official, admitted writing the mysterious document, and declared his charges were completely unfounded. Then Crommelin issued his blast, praising Worth and attacking Pentagon chiefs. Secretary Matthews issued orders after this, forbidding naval officers from making similar statements, but told them they could send their views to him through Navy channels.

Admiral Bogan, a veteran Navy airman, took him at his word. He wrote the Secretary, noting that the latter's order had stated that Crommelin's statements were "inspired by apprehensions concerning the future of naval aviation."

"Mr. Secretary," continued Bogan, "while realizing that this is your honest belief, that interpretation of the genesis of Crommelin's release is the most superficial gloss and does not remotely touch the heart of the question.

"The basic reason behind all of it is a genuine fear in the Navy for the security of our country if the policies followed by the Department of Defense since the National Security Act became law are not drastically changed, and soon."

Bogan noted that he had opposed passage of the Unification Act publicly had come about. had predicted had come about. Unification, he went on, does work in the field. But it "would be sheer balderdash," Bogan declared, to say that it exists at the Pentagon. He added:

"Knowing that honest differences of opinion must constantly be present, bickering is still the rule, unanimity is nonexistent."

Declaring that Navy morale is lower today than at any time since he entered the service in 1916, Bogan said:

"In my opinion this descent, almost to despondency, stems from complete confusion as to the future role of the Navy and its advantages or disadvantages as a permanent career. Optimistic letters and plans issue from Washington. And concurrently the situation deteriorates with each press release."

Many junior officers, said the Pacific Fleet admiral, have been coming to him for advice about staying in the Navy. He declared that he had been encouraging them to do so because current troubles would be solved, but now finds it "increasingly difficult for men to do this honestly."

"We of greater age, and we hope more mature judgment," Bogan went on, "are fearful that the country is being, if it has not already been, sold a false bill of goods."

He declared that if an adequate national defense could be achieved without a Navy or naval aviation, he would "gladly advocate" using naval funds elsewhere. For "not even the United States can support indefinitely, during peace, the tragically large military budgets we are devouring."

Taking issue with the arguments of some air power advocates, Bogan declared:

"There is no cheap quick victory possible between any two nations of groups of nations each having strong even if relatively unequal power. Yet at a time as potentially critical as ever existed during our history, the public has been lured into complacency by irresponsible speeches by advocates of this theory.

"The result could be a great national and world-wide catastrophe."

Admiral Radford forwarded Bogan's letter with the comment that the latter "is an officer of great ability and wide experience in naval aviation and naval warfare." There is "no question of his sincerity and high principles" and "sincere patriotism" was his only motive in writing the letter, he added.

Declaring that the majority of the officers of the Pacific Fleet agreed with Bogan and Crommelin, Radford said that most of them would probably question the "propriety and timing" of such statements.

"Nevertheless," he said, "it would be grave mistake to underestimate the depth and sincerity of their feelings. Because of my conviction that this letter is representative of a general feeling, I commend it to your attention."

Quotes Admiral King

Denfeld, top-ranking uniformed officer of the Navy, passed on the two statements to Matthews with the declaration that he concurred with Radford's comments. He quoted Fleet Admiral King on the dangers to national security of neglecting the Navy. This statement, Denfeld declared, sums up the "present Navy-wide concern." Bogan concluded his letter with a hope that the Navy would be allowed to give its views when the B-36 hearings resume. He declared that the entire subject should be "thoroughly explored with no consideration being given to the reputations or politics of the witnesses who appear."

"It is bigger than personalities, broader and deeper than politics," he added. "It is our country."

Member of the House Armed Services Committees policy subcommittee meet this morning to consider whether to go ahead with such hearings or not. The full committee is expected to meet later in the day or Wednesday morning to decide the issue.

There was no immediate Congressional reaction to the Navy letters, but earlier in the day, Representative Gerald R. Ford, jr., (R., Mich.) accused Navy Secretary Matthews and "top Department of Defense officials" of "gag-rule pressure" and "bully tactics."

He charged Matthews was "overstepping his perogatives" in telling Navy officers what they could tell Congress and called for a "full-fledged, uninhibited hearing" in defense policies.

French Labor Crisis Perils Government

Paris, Oct. 3 (NYHT).—Premier Henri Queuille's "third force" government was threatened today with a new crisis as a result of mounting dissatisfaction within the labor unions and the Socialist Party with the government's recent decisions on domestic policy.

The Communists today renewed their call for "working class unity" and seemed to be closer to realizing it than at any time within the last two years.

There were two developments this evening that were calculated to be particularly disturbing to the government:

1. The executive committee of the non-Communist Force Ouvriere unions of the Paris area asked the national organization of the Force Ouvriere to "break off all negotiations with the government" and call for a 24-hour general strike as a "warning."

2. The executive committee of the Seine Socialist Federation demanded that the party leadership withdraw the Socialist ministers from the government and call immediately a meeting of the party's national council.

Non-Communist and Communist labor leaders alike have said that the government did not go far enough on Saturday when it decided to pave the way for a return to free collective bargaining and to decree certain price reductions, ranging from 5 to 15 percent.

The unions are skeptical about the enforceability of the price cuts and fear that crippling restrictions will be put on their freedom to bargain collectively. They want immediate cash benefits for the workers and say that the government is trying to keep them quiet with promises it does not mean to keep.

Belgians Who Work In France on Strike

Brussels, Oct. 3 (U.P.).—More than 50,000 Belgian border residents who work across the line in France went on strike today for salary increases to make up for a 12 percent wage cut resulting from devaluation.

The reduction was caused by the difference in devaluation rates fixed for the French and Belgian francs. The strikers are mostly from the textile and iron and steel industries, and normally travel across the border daily to their jobs.

taken to Moscow and subjected to "some monstrous method" to make him confess before a Hungarian Communist tribunal in Budapest two weeks ago that he was guilty of plotting with Marshal Tito against Russia.

2. An untold number of honest Communists were killed by the Kremlin on the pretext that they were Trotskyites.

3. Russian practices have caused the working classes of the world to begin to lose faith in communism.

His address was issued by the government press office which said it was delivered after the Yugoslav army's fall maneuvers but did not reveal exactly where or when. He presumably made the address on Saturday in the Shumadija, the maneuver area south of Belgrade.

He said that the maneuvers showed that "our army is excellent in every respect."

He said that the Soviet Union wrongly expected Yugoslavia to sit around quietly at the United Nations' General Assembly in New York while they (the Russians) proceeded to "strike at us, here, with lashes, whips and blows."

Clarifying Yugoslavia's attacks on the Soviet Union at the U. N., he said: "We must not allow our people to be isolated."

Tito Expected To Let Prelate Leave Prison

Vatican City, Oct. 3 (AP).—Vatican informations said today they expected Premier Marshal Tito to throw open the prison doors which clanged shut on Yugoslavia's Catholic primate, Archbishop Alojzije Stepinac, in 1946.

These sources said that when Tito is ready to turn finally to the West, one of his first actions will be to free the primate.

Commenting on the New York World-Telegram's report that the imprisoned Archbishop of Zagreb will be released soon, these persons said it was "very plausible."

The paper, in an article under a Lake Success dateline, said a number of United Nations delegates have been told informally of Tito's plans. The archbishop was jailed three years ago after receiving a 16-year sentence on a charge of collaboration with the Nazis.

A Yugoslav source in the Vatican said that Stepinac has been offered his freedom twice in the past 12 months if he would leave the country. But he replied that he would return to Zagreb.

"Nevertheless," this source observed, "his release is much talked of in the Vatican and is expected."

Chinese Demand Ships' Passengers

New York, Oct. 3 (U.P.).—Chinese Nationalist naval officers have ordered the surrender of all passengers and the dumping of all cargo aboard two Isbrandtsen Line vessels they seized Thursday when the ships left Shanghai, it was disclosed tonight.

Line officials here, in a telegram of protest to President Truman, said the Nationalist demands were presented this morning to officers of the two ships, the Flying Clipper and the Flying Independent.

Several American businessmen departing from Communist-held Shanghai were reported to be passengers aboard the ships.

In its telegram, the company asked that "action be taken to save lives and property before it is too late."

It said that the Nationalists, in presenting their demands to the captains of the two ships, had indicated they would be carried out by force if the American officers did not comply.

"The State Department has publicly declared the United States does not recognize the purported blockade of Chinese ports," the telegram said.

"Now come Chinese destroyers furnished by the American people and create this situation with American ships in violation of existing international law.

In addition to the Americans, the ships also were reported carrying several British and Norwegian passengers, and 130 Korean repatriates.

The vessels were said to be laden with 10,000 tons of general cargo, including tea, hides, tung oil and rapeseed.

The Flying Independent reported by radio to Shanghai yesterday that she and her sister ship had been taken to the Chushan Islands, 100 miles below Shanghai, by Nationalist war vessels which threatened to fire if their orders were not followed.

2d China Blast

'Vassal' Plan Charged to Soviet by Li

Canton (Tuesday) Oct. 4 (AP).—Acting President Li Tsung-jen today charged that Russia aims to make China a vassal state and is utilizing the Chinese Communists for this purpose.

It was the second bitter official denunciation of the Soviet Union since the Russians formally recognized the Red "peoples democracy" at Peiping and severed relations with the Nationalists. The first was read personally by Nationalist Foreign Minister George Yeh last night to the Soviet charge d'affairs.

In a statement, the acting president said the Chinese Communist Party has been under Soviet direction since its birth. He asserted:

"The Chinese Communist bandits, under the direction and leadership of the USSR, have become part of the Communists' international aggressor bloc."

Will Fight to Victory

Li said the Nationalists would fight on in the civil war until victory was achieved.

"We are determined to wipe out the Communists," he declared. "Military setbacks will not shake this determination."

Li said the profit motive might cause some nations to recognize the Communist regime and if they did the "Chinese people" would consider it an unfriendly action.

Summoning the Soviet diplomat, Vladimir Varskov, to the Foreign Office, Yeh informed him relations with the Soviet Union were ended.

Yeh read to him a formal statement declaring that Russian recognition of the "bogus regime" at Peiping was "not only an act of aggression against China, but also a threat to the peace and security of the Far East."

Yeh stated that the recognition was, however, only the natural culmination of a long series of Russian violations of the Chinese-Soviet treaty of 1945 and was merely further evidence of Soviet infringement on China's political independence and territorial integrity.

The 1945 treaty of friendship resulted from the American-British-Russian agreement at Yalta. It gave Russia many special rights in Manchuria. Chinese Nationalists frequently have complained, unofficially and semi-officially, that it was forced on China by the Big Three without advance notice and that Russia has disregarded its provisions at her pleasure.

Nationalists Smash Red Concentration

Canton, Oct. 3 (AP). — The Chinese Nationalists were credited in reliable reports tonight with smashing a Red concentration near Jucheng, 170 miles north of Canton. However, the Communists still held Jucheng.

The Reds also were acknowledged to hold Chihing, 130 miles northeast of Canton.

Chang Kan, considered one of the best Nationalist generals, was reported building up hsi defenses at Kukong, 125 miles northeast of Canton and 30 miles west of Chihing.

Nationalist airmen reported great numbers of Red soldiers moving south in Kiangsi province towards the border of Kwangtung, Canton's home province, with indications another big push, aimed at Canton, was soon to come.

Farther north, in Hunan province, the Nationalists said they inflicted heavy casualties on a Red division near Chihkiang, 350 miles northwest of Canton.

Congress Leaders Will Be Consulted

The State Department said today it will make no move to recognize the new Chinese Communist government without first consulting congressional leaders.

State Department press officer Michael J. McDermott said the United States meanwhile is continuing to discuss all developments in China with "interested friendly governments."

McDermott emphasized that despite the formation of the Chinese Communist regime, the United States still recognizes the Chinese Nationalist Government, which has its capital in Canton.

The United States has received no request from the Communist regime for recognition, he said.

Grand Larceny Charged Here In Jewel Theft

A 23-year-old North Carolinian was charged with grand larceny yesterday after merchandise valued at $217 was taken from a jewelry store in the Mayflower Hotel.

The man, George W. McLain, of Mooresville, N. C., was arrested in his hotel room. He allegedly gave the name of William Hearst 3d in ordering two diamond rings valued at $8000 several days ago, police said.

When he returned to get the rings yesterday, police reported, McLain disappeared when a clerk went to the rear of the store to fetch them. The clerk reported loss of two gold combination bill clips and watches and a gold pen and pencil set. They were found on McLain in his room an hour later, police said.

West Studies Chinese Reds' Recognition

London, Oct. 3 (AP).—Britain, France and the United States, spurred by Russia's lightning-swift diplomatic indorsement of the new Chinese Communist government, are expected to examine this week their own attitude towards recognition.

Britain took the initiative today by announcing she is prepared to discuss recognition with the 11 other nations of the North Atlantic Alliance and the countries of the British Commonwealth—a total of 18 governments.

Meanwhile, both Romania and Bulgaria announced they had followed Russia's lead and recognized the Chinese Communists and it was considered likely a number of other countries notably those behind the Iron Curtain—would take similar action within the next few days.

On Thursday, when British Foreign Secretary Bevin returns to the United States from Canada, he will review with Secretary of State Acheson and French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman what is to be done in the light of the Soviet step, diplomatic informants said here.

The three foreign ministers will be following a line suggested by the United States last April emphasizing that the West should act as a unit in considering any diplomatic approach to the Chinese Reds. Britain and France agreed with the American proposal that they should steer clear of independent recognition.

This sizeable bloc of nations may, through singleness of action, exert pressure on Mao Tze-tung to carry out many of the international commitments shouldered by the Nationalists.

Whatever the western democracies do, it appears an almost foregone conclusion that the infant Communist republic will within the next few days or weeks get diplomatic nods from a number of other countries—notably in eastern Europe.

Russia's formal establishment of relations with the Peiping "Central People's Republic" yesterday was preceded by a break with the Nationalist Kuomintang government which it briefly dismissed as the "provincial government of Canton," its provisional seat.

Commission In Korea Is Recommended

By John G. Rogers

Lake Success, Oct. 3 (NYHT).—The special political committee of the United Nations General Assembly recommended today by a vote of 44 to 6, with five abstentions, that the U. N. continue its Korean Commission and staff it with military observers to enable a vigilant watch for trouble from Russian-sponsored North Korea.

By a vote which also came out 44 to 6, with five abstentions, the committee defeated a Russian resolution which sought to terminate the life of the Korean Commission and to brand the United States as guilty of interfering in the internal affairs of Korea.

The abstentions on both major votes were by Guatemala, Saudi Arabia, Syria, Sweden and Yemen. Yugoslavia joined the Russian bloc in the voting.

The resolution adopted today—under joint sponsorship by the United States, China, Australia and the Philippines—reemphasized that the Republic of Korea, in the south, is the only "lawful" government in Korea, and noted that while the previous commission had verified the withdrawal of Amerisan occupation troops, it had not been permitted to verify the reported withdrawal of Russian troops.

The commission this year will consist of Australia, China, France, India, the Philippines, El Salvador and Turkey.

Reds Asked to Help Find 2 ECA Men on Ship N. Korea Seized

By the United Press

The United States yesterday called on Russia—the "responsible authority in North Korea"—to help find and release an American ship with two United States officials aboard.

The vessel is believed to have been seized by North Korean Communists but the Soviets have refused to permit United Nations representatives to enter the areas.

In a note delivered to Moscow and made public by the State Department, this country asked Russia to help find out just where the vessel and the officials are being held and to "facilitate" their release.

The ship was identified as the merchant vessel Kimball R. Smith which was loaned to non-Communist South Korea by this Government.

The missing Americans are Alfred T. Meschter, Kinderhook, N. Y., and Albert Willis, Brooklyn. They were said to be ECA officials who were assigned to the ship as "advisers" to the Korean crew.

The ship disappeared September 20 while enroute from one South Korean port to another.

East German Rival To Bonn Expected

Berlin, Oct. 3 (AP).—All signs today were that a Communist East German government soon will be set up in Berlin with Walter Ulbright, Moscow-trained veteran of the Spanish Civil War, as Chancellor or Prime Minister.

Foreign diplomatic circles in Moscow were reported of the opinion that Russia signaled for such a government when she protested to the United States, British and French governments last weekend that establishment of a West German government at Bonn had created a "new situation."

Informed British sources in London also were of the opinion that an eastern rival to the federal republic at Bonn soon will be proclaimed with pretensions to representing all Germany.

Communist Gerhart Eisler, fugitive from the United States Department of Justice, refused to comment today on the possibility of the formation of an East German government. He said, however, that "the time is ripe for a solution, and it will come."

Eisler is information director for the East German Economic Commission, which is made up of hand-picked appointees of the Soviet Military Administration. The commission and the Communist-dominated German people's council, headed by Ulbright, are expected to furnish the personnel for the East German government.

Usually reliable political sources said the ministers of the five states in the Soviet zone had been summoned to a conference here Tuesday with the economic commission, but Eisler denied they would meet with the commission.

Eisler said "the people of the east zone showed last weekend what they think and want."

This was a reference to the series of rallies and resolutions adopted at Communist-sponsored world peace day demonstrations throughout the eastern zone.

These rallies demanded an "all German government free of dictatorship by high commissioners"—a reference to the Allied high commission in western Germany—and derided the Bonn government as a puppet of "imperialists."

Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko in his weekend note charged that the three powers had split Germany and violated the Potsdam agreement of 1945 to treat Germany as a united nation. He also charged they had broken the agreement in Paris by the Foreign Ministers' Council last summer to continue efforts to restore the economic and political unity of Germany.

In Frankfurt, an American spokesman said tonight the Soviet government had rejected repeated American proposals to unify Germany.

The spokesman said the reason the Soviets rejected the American proposals was that they would be deprived of maintaining control over the German people "through Communist-dominated satellites."

Vinson Asks Alaska Troop Funds Now

A move to strengthen the Nation's Alaskan defenses took shape on Capitol Hill yesterday.

Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee introduced legislation calling for approximately 153 million dollars to construct housing for troops and improve communications in Alaska. He said he would press for early action on it.

The Alaskan construction already is contained in a defense public works bill approved by the House committee. This measure, however, was "put on ice" until January some weeks ago. In pressing for separate, immediate consideration of the Alaskan projects, Vinson is heeding the urgent advice of top defense chiefs to do something about a "dangerous weakness" in our security plans.

Baruch Again Urges Plan for Mobilization

New York, Oct. 3 (AP).—Bernard M. Baruch said tonight that the Russian atomic blast means this country must set up at once a standby mobilization plan and "maintain our overwhelming advantage" in the field of atomic weapons.

The 79-year-old financier urged also that the United States (1) reexamine its strategy for peace and (2) "stand its ground in insisting upon nothing less than a truly effective international control of atomic energy."

In putting forth his program Baruch ,author of the United States plan for atomic energy control, renewed the controversy in which he and President Truman engaged last summer over the state of American preparedness.

Baruch charged last June that the Truman Administration rejected a standby mobilization plan submitted by the National Security Resources Board. Shortly thereafter President Truman said he hadn't rejected such a plan because the board hadn't submitted one. Baruch, in reply, suggested the President reexamine White House files.

"Everything possible should be planned for in advance, debated and put in law now, so each of us knows what is expected of him or her," Baruch said of standby mobilization today.

"This standby mobilization program is not urged in any alarmist sense. I urged it before the Second World War when it might have prevented Hitler's blitzkrieg. I urged it before the Soviet 'Atomic explosion.' Properly done it could prove our most effective, single deterrent aganist another war."

Baruch said that merely to outlaw the atomic bomb is no insurance against atomic destruction.

"Unless this prohibition is accompanied by a truly effective, enforceable international inspection and control of atomic energy, we would be penalizing those nations which observe agreements to the advantage of those who may not.

"All future atomic energy proposals should be submitted to one test—do they mean safe and sure control? Anything less than that would be worse than nothing."

Baruch urged that a "thoroughgoing civilian defense" accompany the standby mobilization plan.

"This would not mean taking actual mobilization measures now," he said. "What I have urged for more than 20 years is that Congress enact all necessary legislation, to go into effect in event of emergency or proclamation by the President and concurrent resolution of Congress—by both acting together.

"We dare not wait until war has begun and bombs are falling to begin to debate what should be done in the control of prices, wages and rent, the elimination of profiteering, the rationing of scarce necessities, priorities, the civilian defense of our cities and other measures we know would have to be taken in event of war."

Marine Officer Stuck With Weird Radio Giveaway

Lt. John J. Stuttz, of the Marine Corps, and his family, have won a dubious prize in a radio giveaway contest. The prize comes today to the Stuttz home, 903 S. Fillmore st., Arlington.

They received complete supplies for a dinner today in their home. And—two disc jockeys to cook it.

The contest was conducted by Disc Jockey Hugh (Dusty) Rhoades, at Station WFAX, Falls Church. Stuttz won by nominating the "tune of the month," which received the greatest listener approval.

In addition to the dinner supplies, Rhoades and his co-jockey, Ed Case, offered themselves as prizes to cook it.

"I can cook a little out of tin cans," Case said last night. "I don't know how Dusty is. He's married. But the dinner better be good. We have to eat it ourselves, with the Stuttz family."

There's one consolation for the family: The disc jockeys also have to wash the dishes.

Soviets Tighten Regulations for Divorce Actions

Moscow, Oct. 3 (AP).—The Soviet supreme court has decided to put more teeth into the five-year-old divorce law. Its aim is to strengthen family and marriage ties.

The court ruled that divorces will be handed out now only when grounds are "serious and well-founded," when conciliation has failed or when the continuance of the marriage would contradict "the principles of Communist morality."

Before Russia passed its present divorce law in July, 1944, husband and wife could end their marriage simply by registering and paying a small fee. The flood of divorces which followed so alarmed the Communists that new, tighter provisions were made. These made divorce subject to a court decision after the judge had tried to smooth out the family tangle.

4 Americans Decorated By President of Brazil

Rio de Janeiro, Oct. 3 (AP).—President Eurico Gaspar Dutra has conferred the Order of the Southern Cross on four Americans.

They are Cordell Hull, former Secretary of State; Adolf Berle, former Ambassador to Brazil; Francis Cardinal Spellman, Archbishop of New York, and Edgar Morris, chairman of the reception committee for President Dutra when he visited the United States recently.

20 Dead in Flood

Madrid, Spain, Oct. 3 (U.P.).—Recent floods on the northern and eastern coasts of Spain took a toll of at least 20 lives and caused damage estimated at 70 million pesetas ($6,370,000), it was announced today.

Russia Attacks U. S., British Stand on Italian Colonies

Lake Success, Oct. 3 (NYHT.).—Russia charged today that the United States and Great Britain were blocking the independence of the former Italian colonies in order to "set up military bases in connection with aggressive plans against the Soviet Union."

Speaking on the third day of debate on the subject in the political committee of the United Nations General Assembly, Soviet Delegate Amazast Arutiunian denounced the American-British proposals.

Under these, Libya would receive independence in three to five years, Eritrea would be split between Ethiopa and the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, and Italian Somaliland would be held under U. N. trusteeship with Italy as the administering power. Italy already has given up all its claims except that on Somaliland.

Arutiunian, who wound up the day's debate with an hour-long speech, renewed his government's proposal that Libya receive its independence within three months, with all foreign military personnel being withdrawn and all its military bases being liquidated. For Eritrea and Somaliland he asked independence in five years, with administration left to the United Nations.

Arutiunian's charges received support only from the Soviet Ukraine, whose Foreign Minister, Dmitri Z. Manuilsky, told the political committee that Britain was granting air bases to the United States in tte former Italian territories.

Ulate Party Obtains Costa Rican Majority

San Jose, Costa Rica, Oct. 3 (U.P.).—Nearly complete returns from yesterday's congressional election indicated today that President-elect Otilio Ulate's National Union Party would have more than a two-thirds majority in the new national legislature.

With nearly 70,000 votes of an estimated total of 75,000 already tabulated, latest results gave the National Union 32 of the Congress' 45 seats.

Senate Group Ends Hearing On Olds Post

By the United Press

A Senate Commerce Subcommittee closed its hearings on the reappointment of Leland Olds to the Federal Power Commission yesterday after being denied access to an FBI report on Olds.

The nominee, who has been criticized as a left-winger and applauded as a public-minded citizen during the hearings on his nomination to a third five-year term, had informed the Senators that he had no objection to their seeing the FBI report.

But Assistant Attorney General Payton Ford turned down the committee's request for the report. He said it would violate a presidential order to the various Federal agencies not to give Congress confidential reports without White House permission.

Olds, in a final appearance before the Senators, assured them that he is a "profound believer in democracy."

Denies He's Communist

He flatly denied charges he is a "Communist, a traitor to his country, a punk and a jackass." He said he always has been loyal to the United States and its democratic principles.

The committee closed its hearings after receiving a letter from Senator Tom Connally (D., Tex.), asserting the 58-year-old official and writer is "not a proper person" for the post.

Chairman Lyndon D. Johnson (D., Tex.) said the subcommittee may act on the nomination by midweek.

Representative John E. Lyle (D., Tex.) had produced several articles which Olds wrote for the Federated Press in the 1920s. The Congressman asserted they showed the nominee admired communism and was a "foe" of free enterprise. Olds denied the charges.

"In my opinion the very theory of Russian communism represents a negation of democracy," he said.

Wrote to Shock Public

He said he wrote "radical" articles for Federated Press in hope of "shocking" the American public and particularly labor "out of the social and political lethargy resulting from the get-rich-quick fever of speculation which covered a sick capitalism with a glow of health."

Proof the soundness of his approach, he said, lay in the fact that many of the reforms he had advocated had been realized in the past 20 years.

To emphasize the spirit he said was abroad at the time he was writing for Federated Press, Olds quoted from a 1929 speech by Senator Clyde M. Reed (R., Kans.), then Governor of Kansas. The address referred to the "feudal barons of finance" and said they were gaining control of business.

"I believe," Olds added, "that we in America are engaged in the development of a new order within the framework and spirit of the great American Constitution. I believe the most serious threat to our institutions comes from those who refuse to face the need for change."

House Approves $100 Million Fund to Plan Public Works as Safeguard in Depression

By the United Press

The House yesterday approved a proposal to put up 100, millon dollars of Federal money to plan a three-billon dollars backlog of public works as a hedge against future depression.

The bill was passed by a roll call vote of 209 to 69. It was urged as a means of avoiding "leaf raking" projects in case the country has to lunch a "make work" program to provide jobs. The Senate recently passed a similar measure.

The bill authorizes the Government to advance 100, millon dollars amount would provide plans for a to States and local governments to amount would provide plans for a three-billon-dollar program.

If the projects are built, the local agencies will pay all construction costs, and will reimburse the Federal Government for planning advances. If the projects are not built, no repayment would be required.

President Truman recommended the measure to replace a similar program which expired in 1947 after the Federal Government had advanced 65 millon dollars.

Representative George A. Dondero (R., Mich.) led a fight against the measure with an argument that it was "Government paternalism and a waste of the people's money.

Representive Tom Pickett (D., Tex.) protested that there already is a backlog of $1,900,000,000 worth of projects under the preevious law and the new bill would be agencies to seek money from Washington.

Montgomery VFW Lists Special Meeting

A special meeting of Montgomery County post No. 2958, Veterans of Foreign Wars, will take place at 8 p. m., today, at the post's clubhouse adjoining Congressional Airport.

The meeting was called to vote on amendments to the post's by-laws, to consider a new assessment proposal of the Maryland department of the order, and to consider electrical requirements for the clubhouse.

If It Loses Suit

A.&P. Might Become a Cooperative

By Robert S. Allen

John Hartford, head of the huge Atlantic & Pacific grocery chain, is pondering a business bombshell.

During a conference with his attorneys on the anti-trust suit recently brought against A & P by the Justice Department, Hartford was asked what he planned to do in the event the decision went against him.

"If the Government wins," was the prompt reply, "I am not going to give up my stake in the business. I will convert the whole works into the biggest consumer cooperative you ever saw. I'll sell shares in the enterprise to the people of our country, and they will get tax-free patronage dividends.

"I've spent my life building up this business, and I am not going to permit anything to let it go down the drain. I want this business to be a monument to my life's work. If it is illegal to run the business the way we are doing it, then we will run it on a legal, tax-free basis."

Distillers Hit Proposed Barrel Rules

By the United Press

Schenley Distillers, Inc., said yesterday that used whisky barrels are good only for storing "vinegar, chemicals or swill for hogs."

Since whisky falls into none of these categories, it added, the Treasury Department would do well to forget its proposal to overhaul rules governing the aging of whisky.

Schenley expressed its views in a statement issued in connection with a hearing called by the department to consider the rules changes.

The changes, proposed by the department's tax unit, would:

1. Require bourbon, rye and other whiskies—except corn—to be aged at least 24 months in new charred white oak barrels. Straight whiskies would have to age 24 months under similar conditions.

2. Permit distillers to claim time whisky is stored in used barrels as part of its age provided that the label on the bottle clearly states the conditions under which it was aged.

Attack Part II

Opponents concentrated their fire on the second part. While Schenley was the most outspoken in its criticism, it was far from being alone.

John B. Eppler, president of the Associated Cooperage Industries, said it would be a "dangerous reversal of policy" if distillers were permitted to age whisky in used barrels.

Besides, he said, it would be deceiving the drinking public.

W. A. Thompson, president of the Kentucky Distilleries, Inc., makers of "Old Settler" and "Old Lazy Days" liquor, said the proposal would "not help but definitely hurt us."

"Unfair"

He said it would be "unfair to the public and the distillers."

Carroll Mealey, deputy commissioner of the tax unit, couldn't understand what all the fuss was about.

The sole aim of the proposal, he said, is to protect consumers and give them better whisky. He said that as things now stand, a distiller can put corn whisky in a new barrel for one day and call it bourbon.

"And anybody knows that corn isn't bourbon until it's been aged for 18 months," he added.

The hearings closed soon after they began. Officials explained that several scheduled witnesses were absent because of the Jewish holiday.

'Immunity' Kills Traffic Tickets for 6

Six persons connected with embassies in Washington were among 112 who had traffic tickets adjusted last week, the Police Department disclosed yesterday.

Those who had violation notices canceled because of diplomatic immunity included:

Thomas B. Crane, Indian Embassy, obstructing a driveway; Andre Kessler, George Misse and Claude C. R. Tiers, all of the French Embassy(parking overtime, and Roberto Sossa, Argentine Embassy, parked in an entrance.

Sundown Ends Yom Kippur, Jewish Holiday

Services marking Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement, ended at sundown yesterday in Jewish temples and synagogues.

Yom Kippur, the most solemn day in the Jewish religious year, was a day of complete fasting.

It marked the conclusion of a 10-day period of penitence and prayer which began on Rosh Hashonoh, the New Year.

At sundown on Friday Jews will begin their observance of Sukkos, the Feast of Tabernacles. The feast, celebrates the gathering of the harvest and is a time of thanksgiving to God.

Orthodox and Conservative Jews will observe Sukkos for nine days, with the first two and the last two as full holidays. Jews in Palestime and Reform Jews will observe the holiday for eight days, with the first and eighth days as holidays.

House Votes to Double Funds For Hospital Construction

The House voted yesterday to double the amount of Government aid to the States for public hospital construction, increasing it to 150 million dollars.

Extending the Federal-State hospital construction program another four years until 1955, it also increased the Government's share in individual projects from one-third to a top of two-thirds, according to local need.

Passage was by a 236 to 43 roll call vote. The bill now goes to the Senate.

Representative J. Percy Priest (D., Tenn.), author of the bill, said the Nation now needs 897,000 more hospital beds and local communities have been unable to provide them because of high construction costs. He said more hospitals under the Federal-State program would be "the best answer to any demand for socialized medicine."

A report by the House Interstate Commerce Committee showed that the Federal Government already has approved some 500 requests for hospital construction help at an estimated cost of 300 million dollars. It said nearly 300 additional applications are pending.

Writer Urges U. S. History as ERP 'Export'

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

The United States should advertise its history more in Europe to counteract hostile propagandists picturing the country as a money-mad banker.

Kornitzer

That is the belief of Bela Kornitzer, distinguished Hungarian journalist and former chief of Hungary's Ministry of Public Supply now living in New York.

Kornitzer, who has been interviewing famous Americans for a book, "Fathers and Sons," said in Washington yesterday that the story of America's development as a free democracy should be "a Marshall Plan export."

"It would be a revelation to the great mass of Europeans to learn that in the United States free democracy is not a new development, that it is so old and accepted here that no one raises an eyebrow when told that the father of the country's Chief Executive was a horse trader and farmer, and that the father of the Chief Justice of the United States was a jailer in a small Kentucky town," said Kornitzer.

Sought by Gestapo

Kornitzer, who served 14 years in the Hungarian Parliament as a political reporter and was at one time the object of a Gestapo search, came to the United States in 1947.

In 1940 he had written a two-volume work on distinguished European fathers and sons that became a textbook in Hungarian schools. After arriving in the United States he decided that a similar book would help in understanding this country.

In President Truman he believes that he has found the epitome of American character—the lack of class consciousness.

Kornitzer said the Chief Executive is extremely proud of his father, the late John A. Truman, and thought of him as a man of strong and powerful character, who was a great story teller and lover of church hymns.

Put Small Son on Bench

Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson's father, who was a jailer in Lawrence, Ky., would put his small son on the bench beside the judge during court, Kornitzer said.

Senator Taft, as a great realist, Kornitzer said, readily admitted in an interview that being the son of a President and Chief Justice was a great advantage, but Hans Albert Einstein, son of the great physicist, and a professor of civil engineering at the University of California, Berkeley, appeared to feel overshadowed by his famous parent.

Speaking of Albert Einstein, Kornitzer recalled that in the first of two interviews with him, Einstein answered all questions in German except one. Asked what was his reaction to the bombing of Hiroshima, Einstein answered in English, "Horror."

A Plea Against Cruelty to Hats

The average man is cruel to his hat, more cruel than to his other wearing apparel. He throws his hat in the air in enthusiasm. He tosses it in the ring in defiance. He waves it in approval. He pitches it over the bar between the goal posts in exultation. He throws it on the floor in disgust. He jams it down over his eyes in anger, and, when he goes home, he drops it in a chair, or pushes it up on the shelf in the closet.

If he would save his appearance and purse he ought to treat it with at least as much respect as he does his coat, trousers, cravat, or his shoes. He hangs his coat and vest on a form. He either folds his trousers carefully, or hangs them on a hanger. He puts trees in his shoes when he lays them away for the night, and he is careful to see that his tie hangs properly on the tie-rack.

A hat should be hung up carefully where it will not be crowded by other articles and thus be jammed out of shape.

For sanitary reasons, as well as for style and variety, every man should have more than one hat. It is quite necessary that a hat should have an opportunity to air out thoroughly.

The leather should be wiped occasionally with a dry cloth, and turned up allowing the air to get at it.

Dust or dirt should not be permitted to accumulate or remain on a hat. It should be brushed frequently, not with a whiskbroom or stiff brush, but with a soft brush. A derby should be wiped with a piece of soft overcoating; a silk hat, with a silk handkerchief.

A radiator, or any other hot or warm place is no place for a hat. It is shaped with heat and heat will get it out of shape.

If a hat is wet, it should be dried slowly in its natural shape. The moisture should be shaken off gently, and the creases and dents in the crown pushed out and the brim shaped. Then it should be laid down where it will not be disturbed until it is bone dry.

Your hat costs money . . . It should be given as much care as any other good article. No more should be expected of a hat than of any other article of dress. Your hat is the most noticeable thing you wear. If it is dingy, shapeless and uncared for it will ruin the effect of an otherwise perfect ensemble. Frankly, you are not well dressed unless you're wearing a hat.

HATS ON, America!
—it's NATIONAL HAT WEEK
October 2 to 8

did you know that 1/8 of an inch makes all the difference in your appearance

It may not seem much to you . . . but ⅛ of an inch does make a difference in your hat. A brim too wide overshadows . . . and a brim too narrow over-accentuates your face. There's only one width brim that looks best on you . . . and an eighth of an inch either way makes the difference in your appearance.

We're telling you this, not so much to remember when buying your new hat this week, but for information you might like to know. The reason you don't have to remember it is that EVERY HAT SALESMAN in the Men's Wear Stores of Washington KNOWS THE BRIM WIDTH that looks smartest on you.

His trained eye immediately "sizes-up" the shape of your face and contour of your build . . . his deft crown-creasing fingers offer the hat best suited to you.

All you need say is, "I'd like to see a hat!" Just leave the Brim-Situation to us.

Hats on, Washington!

Green Pledges AFL To Seek Wage Rises

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 3 (AP).—The AFL leadership today rejected the Government's current no-pay-boost formula and counselled workers against any letup in seeking wage increases.

William Green, AFL president, said in a keynote address opening the federation's annual convention that the AFL will "constantly" strive for higher wages.

Green hit out at President Truman's steel fact-finding board's recommendations against any wage raises at this time for American workers. That board called for employer-paid welfare programs, instead, saying wage changes could upset the national economy.

The AFL leader said wages can be boosted without raising prices and, amid loud applause, declared:

"We don't accept the principle of Government boards setting our wages anywhere."

Green said the American Federation of Labor never has "waived our right to demand wage increases for the workers of America—and we are not going to do it."

"Labor," he shouted, "must share in the earnings of these corporations and we must share equitably. We're not going to give up the right to demand an equitable share of these earnings."

Green said the convention's most important business will be planning a political drive for next year's congressional elections even more potent than the AFL's 1948 push in behalf of President Truman.

Green said the AFL has a paid up membership now of eight million, a figure considerably above the one given to the convention in a formal officers' report. The report gave the paid membership as 7,241,290.

The officers' report called for a drive to reduce the present 40-hour standard work week, as well as a campaign for more wages.

In calling for improved pay for workers, despite the Presidential steel board's contrary recommendation, Green said a 15-cent hourly increase was won recently for 20,000 teamsters' union members in northern New York State.

He said the AFL was better unified than the CIO and thus stronger to fight for labor's objectives.

Referring to the CIO, he said "we have no right and left wings in our organization, when we speak we speak as one."

The AFL's political war chest was fattened with a decision of William Hutcheson, president of the big AFL Carpenters Union, to contribute $100,000 toward the AFL's Labor League for Political Education.

Hutcheson, who had held aloof from the AFL's 1948 political program, confirmed to reporters he had decided to kick in the sum toward the AFL's 1950 election-year drive to elect Congress members pledged to Taft-Hartley repeal.

H. S. Shulman Named to C T Dispute Board

Dr. Harry Shulman, Sterling professor of law at Yale University, will serve on the arbitration board in the Capital Transit wage dispute, succeeding Clark's Fahy, former solicitor general who resigned, it was announced yesterday.

Dr. Shulman

The start of arbitration hearings, which had been set for yesterday, will be delayed until next Tuesday morning, the company said. The arbitrators, who must choose a new chairman to replace Fahy, will meet at the Hamilton Hotel.

Dr. Shulman, who has been permanent umpire in labor issues between the Ford Motor Co. and the United Auto Workers since 1943, was chosen by Capital Transit and the union, Division 689, Amalgamated Association of Street Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes, from a list of three named by the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service.

Other members of the board are Charles A. Horsky, a former Department of Justice attorney; Alfred A. Colby, secretary of the National Academy of Arbitrators; John Curtin, Philadelphia labor adviser to transit companies, who represents Capital Transit, and O. David Zimring, Chicago labor lawyer, representing the union.

A strike for higher wages, set for last July 1, was called off at the last moment when the arbitration procedure was agreed on.

Plans Air Inspection

London, Oct. 3 (U.P.).—Lieut. Gen. Curtis Le May, chief of the United States Air Force Strategic Air Command, which includes B-29 and B-50 atom bombers, will inspect the United States Third Air Force in England some time this month, Air Force officials said today.

Mine Union Ousts Pensioner Who Asked Accounting

Uniontown, Pa., Oct. 3 (AP).—George H. Livengood, pensioned coal miner who filed a Federal Court suit for an accounting of the United Mine Workers welfare fund has been expelled by his union local.

UMW Local 6308 yesterday dropped Livengood from membership. The 54-year-old miner was charged with violating union by-laws in instituting a civil action before presenting his grievance to the local.

Livengood's suit, filed in Washington two weeks ago, charged "wrongful dissipation" of the fund and asked removal of the trustees, which include John L. Lewis, UMW president.

At the time the suit was filed, the veteran miner said he believed the Taft-Hartley Act would prevent his expulsion from the UMW.

cause their output has no bearing on contract negotiations.

As for any plans for an early end to the strikes that could cripple the Nation's industrial life: They are most conspicuous by their absence.

Federal mediators reportedly are trying to hatch plans to bring an end to both disputes. But they faced these discouraging problems:

If they solve the steel problem, and not coal, steel would soon have to shut down again because of a coal shortage.

If they solve the coal problem, and not steel, coal would soon have to shut down again because of a customer shortage.

The only news from any of the four disputing parties is negative.

John L. Lewis' UMW Journal declared the miners won't "give on the matter of wages, pensions, hours or working conditions."

And Pihil Murray, president of the Steelworkers, insisted in his last statement that he doesn't intend to budge either. Ditto for the coal operators.

Today's developments showed how economic pressures build up in such a strike:

Dockhand members of the steelworkers union, who handle iron ore on the Great Lakes, walked out. This held up the unloading of ore at Detroit, Cleveland and Buffalo.

Murray said over the weekend he will call out another 500,000 steelworkers—those who change the raw steel and iron into finished products—if the union's terms are not met. These contracts start to run out October 15.

The New York Central said it will lay off 4000 workers if the strikes continue. It figures it will lose 12 million dollars monthly.

The Pennsylvania Railroad figures it loses 21 million dollars a month.

And the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad estimates if the coal tieup continues through October it will cost the company 11 million dollars. Another $3,700,000 is anticipated if the steel walkout isn't ended by November 1.

The B. & O. already has furloughed 11,000 workers since the three-day week started in the coal mines. Further layoffs are in the offing.

Two Baltimore plants manufacturing refactory linings for steel furnaces laid off 680 workers today.

The American Iron and Steel Institute estimated steel production for the first week will fall off by 1,408,600 tons, which eventually will affect everything from the manufacture of locomotives to needles.

In Alabama, weekly losses from both coal and steel were estimated at 33 million dollars.

A company spokesman in West Virginia said that State already has lost 100 million dollars because of the coal strike. Said J. V. Sullivan, secretary of the West Virginia Coal Association:

"This strike is the most expensive John L. Lewis ever planned to satisfy his arrogant lust for power."

Compare this with the statement in the Mine Workers' Journal. The coal operators, said the Journal, have a conspiracy program to demolish Lewis and smash the union. Operators, it continued, have begun to make money again. They're "feeling their oats," and so have "returned to their old evil ways."

Although Lewis never has specifically listed his demands, pensions and Social Security benefits figure prominently in both disputes. The miners now get a 20-cent-a-ton royalty for their welfare. This has not been sufficient, Lewis has said, and payments from the fund have been stopped. He is expected to ask that this payment be increased to at least 30 cents a ton and that the workweek be shortened with no decrease in pay.

The steel industry has bogged down over a principle: Who will pay the bill for the workers' pensions and insurance?

Big Steel—the U. S. Steel Corp., which sets the wage pattern for the industry—has offered an insurance and pension proposal, but wants the workers to help pay for it.

Philip Murray has insisted that this would be, in effect, a wage cut. He wants the companies to pay the whole bill.

700 Bridge Workers Stay Out on Orders

Roanoke, Va., Oct. 3 (AP).—Seven hundred employes of Virginia Bridge Co. failed to show up for work this morning in accordance with telegraphic instructions received last Friday from nation! Steel Workers Union headquarters.

The Rev. C. A. Reynolds, president of Steel Workers Local No. 3090, said here this morning, "Everything is peaceful, but nobody's working." He declined further comment.

B. & O. Recalls 1200 Employes

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 3 (AP).—Some 1200 furloughed Baltimore & Ohio Railroad employes were to return to work today, but there was a good chance they again would be laid off.

Sixteen Are Killed In Train-Bus Crash

Ontario, Calif., Oct. 3 (AP).—Ten Air Force men from March Air Base, five girls and their chaperone were killed when a speeding train tore into the bus on which they were returning from a beach party last night.

The death list dropped to 16 today when the coroner's office discovered one duplication.

The Air Force still declined to name its personnel killed, but the coroner's office gave these names, without ages or home addresses:

William C. Nave, Conrad N. McClay, Ralph Halliwill, Raymond Stocker, Michael Casper, Gordon G. Crimin, Sylvester A. Till, Doyle Hall, Henry L. Leary, Ralph D. McDonald. Deputy Coroner E. P. Doyle said Hall apparently was the bus driver.

Shouted directions to the driver, confused on a dark, unfamiliar road, were blamed tentatively for the wreck.

Only five bus passengers survived. The bus was carrying the soldiers and girls back from the outing. A survivor, Sergt. Peter Grisolia, 21, Brooklyn, N. Y., said passengers were calling to the unidentified driver about directions to the girls' homes just before the crash.

No one on the train was injured.

Air Force officers said names of base personnel would be released after notification of relatives.

The identified civilian dead:

Mrs. Ruby McLaughlin, 45, Ontario, the chaperone; Juanita McLaughlin, 18, her daughter; Mary Allen, 17, Alta Loma, Calif.; Romona de Bra, 23, Ontario; Marilyn Bigley, 18, Upland, Calif.; Gloria Myers, 19, Ontario.

The train was the Union Pacific's "Pony Express" eastbound to Chicago.

Passenger Killed In Train Wreck

Ames, Iowa, Oct. 3 (AP).—The crack Chicago & Northwestern "City of San Francisco" streamliner, left the rails at more than 40 miles an hour here early today and one passenger was killed when half the side of a passenger coach was sheared away.

Four persons were injured severely and 35 others aboard the damaged coach escaped with minor cuts and bruises.

Although five cars filled with slumbering passengers left the rails, the only major damage was to chair car 101. It was gashed open for 30 feet when it plowed against a box car on a siding.

Ernest Briggs, 40-year-old carpenter returning to the Oakland, Calif., Air Base from his honeymoon trip, was killed. His bride was not hurt.

U. S. Running Out of Money for Farm Props, Aiken Warns

Brannan as saying that under rigid 90 percent supports, that there "will be so much money in the program that the American taxpayer can't stand it."

A similar warning was heard from Senate Majority Leader Scott Lucas of Illinois. Lucas offered an amendment to cut down "inflated subsidies" on some farm commodities.

Lucas declared there was danger that extending price supports over all farm products would "break down farm supports."

Lucas' amendment would exclude exports on which the Government lost money from being figured as part of the normal demand for such products. He pointed out that if his amendment was in effect now, there would be a 15 to 20 percent surplus of peanuts, instead of only 91 percent of normal demand. The difference would cut the price support level for peanuts from 90 percent to about 85 percent of parity under the sliding scale of both the Aiken and Anderson bills.

The day's debate brought out a series of charges:

1. Senator A. Willis Robertson (D., Va.) declared that the change in the parity formula in the Anderson bill was supported by the American Federation of Labor. This would include the cost of hired farm labor in figuring parity.

2. Senator Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) declared that he may offer the Brannan Plan as a substitute for the Anderson bill today. Thomas told newsmen that he favored "high price supports."

Hog Price Supports Will Be Reduced

The Government announced yesterday it will support producer prices of hogs from October through next March at levels ranging 11 to 22 percent below current market prices.

The monthly support rates for all hogs, on a national average at the farm, were set as follows:

October $16.40 for 100 pounds; November, $15; December, $14.20; January, $14.90; February, $15.50; and March, $16.20.

These rates are designed to assure producers at least 90 percent of parity. Parity is a farm product price goal designed to keep farmers on a basis of economic equality with nonfarmers.

The Agriculture Department also announced that it will support grower prices of 1949-crop corn at a national average of $1.40 a bushel. This compares with an average of $1.44 for the 1948 crop.

Actual support rates will vary by counties, ranging from $1.29 to $1.66 a bushel. Last year support rates ranged from $1.34 to $1.66.

Senate Votes Support For Price of Honey

By The Associated Press

The Senate responded quickly today to an appeal for help for the honey bee.

By voice vote it passed a farm bill amendment to support the price of honey.

Senator Watkins (R., Utah) told the Senators that low prices are threatening to drive honey growers out of business. He said at least 590 crops would be affected if that came to pass since they depend on bees to fertilize them.

Senator Anderson (D., N. M.), floor manager for the farm bill, said the cost of supporting honey prices would run about $1,900,000 and added "it seems to me that it is an extraordinary expense."

'Rights' Bills Are Postponed

only Administration leaders but the leading minority groups interested in the legislation are in agreement on the new civil rights strategy.

He said he plans to call up the FEPC bill right after legislation repealing Federal taxes on oleomargarine, which previously was given second session priority.

ADA Issues Statement

Americans for Democratic Action, which previously had pressed for action this year, issued this statement:

"Because the Administration has constantly put off a showdown on civil rights measures, its action today may have been unavoidable. If the Administration really means what it says about civil rights, it will make FEPC the first order of business in the next session and will reverse (Defense) Secretary Johnson's sellout on Jim Crow in the Army."

One Other "Must" Bill

Practical effect of the decision was to signal the end of the session. Only one other "must" bill—legislation liberalizing the displaced persons act—involved any threat of filibuster, but leaders hoped to break through to a vote in four or five days.

Lucas declined to set any definite adjournment date pending a conference with House leaders today on program windup. He said he felt sure Congress could finish, however, before the end of the week of October 16.

The House, meanwhile, swung into the adjournment stride by prodding for action on the last deadlocked money bills and tackling its last major piece of legislation:

1. The House Rules Committee by a 5 to 4 party line vote broke its stalemate on legislation greatly broadening the Government's social security program. The House will open debate on the bill today under "closed rule" procedure. This will permit four days of debate and then an up or down vote on the bill. Except on a motion to recommit, the House would not be permitted to change any provisions of the committee bill.

Fund Measure Rushed

2. A fifth "stopgap" appropriation bill was sped through the House to keep the military establishment, the Interior Department and some other agencies in funds until October 10. By that date Congress hopes to clear its last log-jammed money measure, including one not yet launched, providing funds for the European arms program and economic aid to Korea.

Lucas took the Senate floor late in the day to announce the decision to postpone a civil rights showdown and outline a tentative program for the balance of the session.

Lucas said these bills will be called up in Senate following action on the pending farm bill:

REA loans for rural telephone financing, emergency school construction in special Federal areas, "middle class" housing aids, Korean economic aid, increased United States representation in the United Nations Assembly, "Point 4" guarantees against risks to investors abroad, the military installation bill, the so-called cigarette tax bill and the displaced persons measure. Lucas said "two or three" other measures may be added to the list.

Appeal Will Obtain Sanity Case Restudy

A District Court judge refused yesterday to follow a United States Court of Appeals decision which he feels deprives mental hospital inmates of a legal right in seeking their freedom.

Judge T. Alan Goldsborough agreed he was acting "in contravention" with the word of his judicial reviewers, and asked lawyers to get the appeals body to decide the matter again.

"The practise adopted by the Court of Appeals was of such a character that if you get into an insane hospital, the only way you can get out is to break out," said Judge Goldsborough.

His decision meant that D. Farson Boddie, 33, Navy Department employe, need not return to St. Elizabeths Hospital unless the Appeals Court reverses Judge Goldsborough.

The legal question is whether a District Court can free St. Elizabeths Hospital patients in habeas corpus proceedings without referring the cases to the Commission on Mental Health.

In 1945, according to Judge Goldsborough, the Appeals Court decided the matter in Dorsey vs. Gill. The high court said that "the trial judge had no authority to discharge under habeas corpus," said Goldsborough.

Judge Goldsborough interpreted the Court of Appeals:

"If he felt the patient was probably of sound mind, the matter should be again referred to the Commission on Mental Health . . . and then if the commission decided he was sane, he should be released. And if it was decided he was not of sound mind, he should have a right to jury trial, if he made application in five days."

Assistant U. S. Attorney John J. O'Leary agreed to appeal the case after Judge Goldsborough said:

"This court has grave doubt that if the matter was before the Court of Appeals again, they would make the same decision they did before. I haven't heard a word, and I don't mean to make any intimation, but I just feel that what was done before probably was done impulsively."

Boddie, who is a graduate of the National University School of Law and intends to take his bar examinations here shortly, was arrested in March after an alleged fight and was charged with disorderly conduct. The case was nolle prossed, but subsequently a District Court jury on June 22 committed Boddie as of unsound mind.

Boddie, according to Government psychiatrists, at the time was "emotionally unstable, showed sudden mood swings, was euphoric, tense, agitated and irritable and at times was suspicious and quite secretive."

Last month Boddie wrote the District Bar Association for aid, and Attorney F. Bateman Ennis was assigned to help him. After two psychiatrists said Boddie was not dangerous and Boddie's psychiatrists said the man was of sound mind and capable of handling his own affairs, Goldsborough decided he need not call in the Mental Health Commission and instead ordered Boddie released without this reference.

Boddie promised to stay in the District until after the appeal. He will reside with his aunt, Mrs. Thomas A. Groover, of the Wardman Park Hotel.

Youth Cleared Of Suspicion on D. C. Rape Charge

An 18-year-old youth, held in Rockville Jail on a rape charge there, has been cleared of suspicion in one Washington rape but a detainer has been placed against him in another, it was learned yesterday.

The youth, Howard Martin, was arrested by Montgomery County police at his Tobeytown home early Thursday and charged with the rape of a neighbor woman on September 1.

Believed to have committed a similar offense on a Washington woman, June 12, in Rock Creek Park, he was questioned by Washington detectives two days last week. Martin proved, however, that on that date he was serving a 10-day sentence for an assault in the Rockville Jail.

The third case, in which the detainer was filed, involved an attack on a 26-year-old woman, September 24, in the "Foggy Bottom" section of Northwest Washington.

"Precautions should be continued against dangerous tides and hurricane winds on the upper Texas and extremes west Louisiana coasts and for gales and high tides on remainder of Louisiana coast.

For Distance of 200 Miles

"Heavy rains and high winds are expected for a distance of 200 miles to the north of Freeport-Lake Charles area. Hurricane warnings are displayed north of Corpus Christi, Tex., to Lake Charles, La., and storm warnings on the remainder of the Louisiana coost. Small craft east of the Louisiana coast should remain in port."

Ten-foot waves pounded Galveston's $1,500,000 pleasure pier. Waves were ripping the planking of the wooden free-fishing pier.

Galveston's municipal airport went under water by 8 p. m. and 100 persons who sought refuge in the Santa Fe building near the Galveston waterfront on the bay side, watched water slowly backing into the street.

The coast was ready. Galveston, Houston and Freeport were boarded up and battened down. Many people had moved inland or gone to public buildings turned into shelters. Pioneer airlines moved its planes out of Houston. Clerks and dispatchers were sent to Dallas to set up emergency headquarters.

But there appeared no way to save millions of dollars worth of rice still in the fields.

The Weather Bureau said the hurricane would throw high winds and heavy rains 200 miles inland from the coast as it struck.

Heavy rains fell in the area in the hurricane's path, and water ran through streets.

Freeport's biggest industry is a 150-million-dollar Dow Chemical Co. plant, sprawling over 2200 acres.

Dow ordered the plant completely shut down by 10 p. m. (CST). It advised 2600 workers to clear out of town. Two hundred were told to stay in shelters at the plant as a standby force.

About one-third of the Freeport area's 25,000 people moved inland wherever they could find a place to stay.

Galveston is a rich resort city on an island just off the coast. Between here and Freeport, the towns and population stretch thinly. But in the lee of Galveston island are the industrial port cities of Texas City and La Marque, on the mainland.

The main street of Port Lavaca (population 5000) was 5 inches under water from the rain.

Hundreds of dwellers in low areas along the coast were evacuated. Many flocked into Victoria and Corpus Christi.

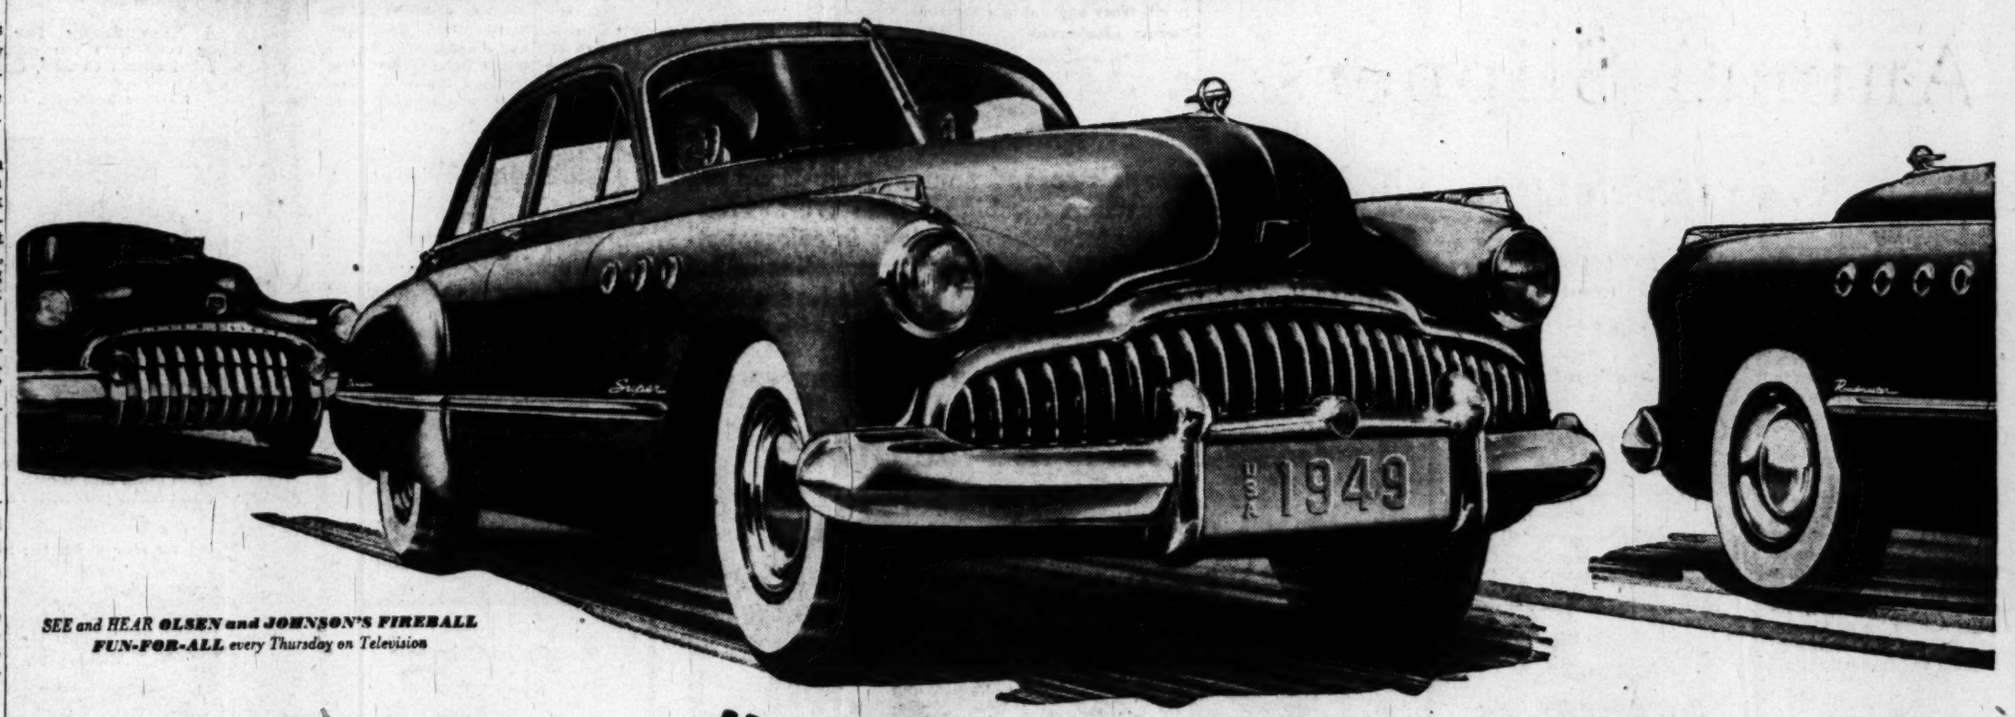
Whatever the Price Class—



SEE and HEAR OLSEN and JOHNSON'S FIREBALL FUN-FOR-ALL every Thursday on Television

"Buick's the Buy"

It's part of every street scene—something you see every day.

Car owners in three different price classes—all happy about the same thing.

Another will tell you there's nothing like the SUPER's "happy medium" of size and comfort, power and easy handling, style and standing.

And if you're looking for prestige, where is your money going to buy so much as in that handsome 18-footer, the ROADMASTER, with its 150-hp performance and really royal bearing?

But all these good folks get together on this:

There's no ride quite so soft and cushiony as the Buick ride, whatever the size and series. There's no power quite so satisfyingly lively as Buick's high-compression, high-pressure Fireball power.

Above all, there's no "buy" like a Buick—no car that gives you such a rich dollar's worth of smartness, handling, comfort and liveliness for every dollar you pay.

So why not look the whole line over? Your Buick dealer has these grand travel-mates in a baker's dozen of different body types and sizes. Start your shopping in his showroom—and you'll find that even on delivery he has exactly what you want.

BUICK alone has all these features

Silk-smooth DYNAFLOW DRIVE* • FULL-VIEW VISION from enlarged glass area • SWING-EASY DOORS and easy access "LIVING SPACE" INTERIORS with Deep-Cradle cushions • Buoyant-riding QUADRUFLEX COIL SPRINGING • Lively FIREBALL STRAIGHT-EIGHT POWER with SELF-SETTING VALVE-LIFTERS (Dynaflow Models) plus HI-POISED ENGINE MOUNTINGS • Low-pressure tires on SAFETY-RIDE RIMS • Double-Duty VENTIPORTS • DUREX BEARINGS, main and connecting rods • BODY BY FISHER

*Standard on ROADMASTER, optional at extra cost on SUPER and SPECIAL models

Keneipp in Budget Estimate of $1,124,000 Asks Money for 30 More Traffic Signals

Funds for 30 new traffic lights are asked by George E. Keneipp, Director of Motor Vehicles and Traffic, in his budget request for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1950.

Keneipp told the Commissioners in submitting his figures that were it not for possible loss of 1 cent a gallon in gasoline taxes he would ask for 80 instead of 30 signals, and also seek money to start building a new motor vehicle inspection station in the Northwest section.

The District gasoline tax is now 4 cents per gallon, on a temporary basis. It will revert to 3 cents on July 1, 1951, unless Congress acts in the meantime.

Keneipp's budget request was for $1,124,400, which is an increase of $175,100 over the current year's appropriation.

In addition to the 30 new traffic signals, Keneipp seeks:

Addition of six auto inspectors to man completely the present two inspection stations.

Money to start microfilming auto title records dating back not more than 1 years. These now occupy 2000 square feet of storage space, which could be reduced to 20 feet.

Twenty-one new employes, including a full-time director for the Motor Vehicle Parking Agency, created in 1942 to develop more adequate off-street parking facilities.

Keneipp reported that District residents now keep their vehicles in better mechanical shape.

He said that in the 1948 registration only 52.6 percent failed to pass initial inspections, compared with 73.5 percent in 1945, and 57.1 percent in 1941. He said that the reduction in rejections is in the face of the fact that 60 percent of all vehicles are seven or more years old.

Miss Daniel to Speak

Police Ask $7,815,000 Budget

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Funds for a new building to house the Woman's Bureau and a radio service shop, plus revival of suggestions for promotions in higher ranks, were included in a record-breaking Police Department budget request submitted yesterday.

The $7,815,000 request—a boost of $1,143,051 over 1950—asks for $75,000 during the fiscal year starting July 1, 1950, for purchase of a site for a new Woman's Bureau and House of Detention. The present structure, located in an old precinct station house, has been considered a fire hazard and unsuited for its present use.

Police Supt. Robert J. Barrett said a survey is now being made of land adjoining the old First Precinct station on New Jersey ave., between D and 1 sts. nw., as a possible site.

A second project proposed is the erection of a radio service shop and storeroom costing $35,000 to replace present facilities at the Tenth Precinct station house, Park rd. and Georgia ave. nw.

No Facilities Now

The planned two-story brick building would provide space for three automobiles on the ground floor and a parts storeroom on the second. At present there are no facilities for servicing radios in mobile equipment, Major Barrett said.

On the personnel side of the budget, the department asked for:

1. Promotion of six lieutenants to captains at a cost of $4470, the promotions to be effective while the men were in command of the homicide, robbery, general assignment, special investigations and sex squads and in charge of the pawn inspector's office.

A similar proposal was made last year and was cut from the budget by the District Commissioners. Barrett said that lieutenants in some squads now get only $67 a year more than the detective sergeants under their command, but are expected to assume full responsibility for the squads.

2. Promotion of four detective sergeants to lieutenants at a cost of $272. The promotions would be effective while the officers are assigned to head the automobile and bicycle squad, check and fraud squad, narcotic squad or as administrative assistant to the chief of detectives.

"Although these officers are in command of others they bear the same rank and draw the same pay as their subordinates," Major Barrett pointed out, "this is a condition which should be remedied as soon as possible to promote greater efficiency and improve morale."

Twenty Lieutenants

3. Creation of 20 lieutenancies at a total cost of $92,700. One would be hack inspector, a position now filled by borrowing an officer from other assignments. Two were requested as supervisors in the communications and records bureau during the 4 to 12 and 12 to 8 tours of duty. At present two temporary lieutenants fill the posts.

Two are planned as supervisory officers at the police and fire clinic and at courts to keep an eye on policemen at these locations and to "handle any delinquencies which may occur."

Another lieutenant is for assignment as director of the Police Boys' Club to aid in the campaign against juvenile delinquency.

The remaining 14 lieutenants were asked for the Detective Bureau to correct a condition whereby presently "some of the most valuable investigators have been assigned to precincts" since the bureau has no positions available for investigators as lieutenants.

Appointment of three sergeants and two corporals for service in the communications and records bureau. One of the sergeants would coordinate license activities.

5. Payment of $163 each to 50 probational detectives who now provide their own cars and clothes in plainclothes operations without any additional compensation.

6. Appointment of 30 privates at $92,310 to reimburse the department for the services of 30 privates now on license work for various other city departments. This was asked last year and denied.

Major Barrett asked for no other privates, although the present uniformed force of 1952 is below the 2500 he had estimated during his appearances on Capitol Hill was necessary for city protection.

7. Addition of 28 civilian employes at a cost of $66,318 for service in headquarters and the precinct station houses.

In all, $465,999 is requested for new appointments, promotions and automatic increases. The department has asked for a total of $7,695,000 for operating expenses and $10,000 for use in welcoming visiting dignitaries to the city.

Major Barrett repeated his request for a $3500 sedan for use in entertaining "distinguished visitors" and the transportation of members of his staff and himself when conferences are called.

He also asked for $5000 for equipping the department gymnasium on the sixth floor of the Municipal Center "for initial training and for the systematic exercise of the other members." An additional thousand is asked for equipping the Metropolitan Police baseball team.

The department asked for $80,000 to complete conversion of the police radio system to frequency modulation as directed by the Federal Communications Commission.

Six additional scout cars were requested for assignment in the busier precincts to avoid the necessity of withdrawing cars from outlying precincts.

A panel truck to be used as a mobile identification laboratory was requested. This vehicle, to cost $2500, could be driven to the scene of a crime or accident and provide cameras and developing equipment, fingerprint facilities, flood lights and generator.

A covered van costing $4500 was asked for use in emergencies. This would be equipped with weapons and tear gas equipment, searchlights and a public address system.

Political Parades Banned

London, Oct. 3 (U.P.).—Home Secretary James Chuter Ede today banned all political parades in London for the next three months, after Sir Oswald Mosley's Fascist union planned a parade in the East End Tuesday night and Communists announced a counterdemonstration.

Tax Chief and Others Ask Tuck for Budget Increases

Richmond, Va., Oct. 3 (AP).—Governor Tuck's budget advisory board was not surprised today when the spokesman of several agencies appeared to ask budget increases of nearly three million dollars for the next two years.

But the testimony of C. H. Morrissett, State tax commissioner, was different. He told the budgeteers that some five million dollars could be added to State collections in the next biennium if tax authorities are given additional facilities to enforce tax laws.

Morrissett asked for an increase of $530,000 in his new budget to help go after people who fail to file their State income taxes. Total requests were $1,251,102.

At least two agencies sought salary raises for top officials. The State Corporation Commission proposed to increase the pay of its three members from $9960 to $12,000 each. The State Board of Elections asked for $7000 for its executive secretary.

And the Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board suggested, without mentioning any definite figure, that it would appreciate "any consideration" the budgeteers could give to raising salaries of board members, who haven't had a raise in several years.

A request by State Labor Commissioner E. M. Boggs for funds—he didn't say how much—to start a conciliation and mediations service in the State Department of Labor and Industry evoked a favorable response from Tuck. Bogs said such a service could be "invaluable" in smoothing out industrial disputes.

Several spokesmen for the United Daughters of the Confederacy appeared before the budget-makers to ask for State help in trying to have UDC national headquarters and Confederate memorial building located here in Richmond.

They proposed the State make available a site for the structure on land formerly owned by the R. E. Lee Camp Veterans Home in Richmond.

FTC Approves Sale of WOL For $300,000

Approval of the sale of radio stations WOL and WOL-FM, to the Capital Broadcasting Co., which now operates Station WWDC and WWDC-FM here, was announced yesterday by the Federal Communications Commission.

The deal involved $300,000, it was disclosed.

As a condition of approval, the FCC decreed that within 90 days Capital Broadcasting shall divest itself of all interests in the WWDC setup.

WOL and WOL-FM are the Washington outlets and also are originating stations for the Mutual Broadcasting System. They have been owned by the Cowles Broadcasting Co., which is affiliated with Cowles Publications.

Williams Sworn In As Assistant District Attorney

James Leon Williams, 36, of 1609 Kearney st. ne., was sworn in yesterday as an assistant United States attorney for the District of Columbia.

A native of Longview, Tex., he attended Prairie View State College and Wiley College in that State. In 1937 he came to Washington and has been employed in several Government departments since then.

At the same time he was a student at Howard University and later at the Robert H. Terrell Law School, graduating from the latter in 1947. He was admitted to the District bar last year. He is married and has a daughter. He is a member of the District Bar Association, of Sigma Delta Tau legal fraternity and Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity.

Tucker Associate Says 2 Magazines Are in Contempt

Chicago, Oct. 3 (AP).—Counsel for one of Preston Tucker's indicted associates today asked that editors of two magazines be held in contempt of court for publishing articles about the ill-fated Tucker auto concern.

Bert W. Dilling, attorney for Robert Pierce, contended publication of articles in Collier's Magazine and the Reader's Digest before the trial of Tucker, Pierce and six others on mail fraud charges was a violation of Federal law.

Tucker, president of the auto company now undergoing reorganization; Pierce, former director and treasurer, and the others are to go on trial Tuesday before Federal Judge Walter J. LaBuy. In addition to mail fraud they are charged with violation of Securities and Exchange Commission regulations.

Colonel Lands Powerless Jet With Flashlight

San Diego, Calif., Oct. 3 (AP).—A Marine colonel landed a powerless jet fighter plane with little more than a flashlight and a prayer last night.

Lieut. Col. Marion Carl brought the F-9-F Navy Panther down from 25,000 feet in a 40-mile glide after a power failure.

He used the flash light to watch the air speed indicator, the only instrument he had left. His other hand held the control stick.

When the cockpit windshield started to frost inside he had to drop the flashlight to wipe it off.

"That was the only time I was worried," said Carl. "I needed three hands."

Carl was en route from Portland, Oreg., to his home station at Cherry Point, N. C., via San Diego, when the electrical system failed.

Court of Appeals Approves Krouse

The United States Court of Appeals announced yesterday it has approved the appointment of Allen J. Krouse to the newly created position of Chief Deputy Clerk.

Krouse, who is 45 years old, was born in Pennsylvania, graduated from Georgetown Law School in 1928, served as Asssitant United States Attorney here from 1934 to 1943 and has been in private legal practice since.

He is married, has two children and lives at 606 Quintana pl. nw.

Arlington Hospital Restores Surgery

Arlington Hospital, which banned all "elective" surgery in August, is back on a regular full-scale operating schedule, Hospital Administrator John J. Anderson announced yesterday.

The hospital's staff of specially trained operating room nurses, down to three in August, is now up to a normal eight, Anderson said. He blamed a "seasonal shortage" for the earlier depletion.

The order affected non-emergency cases like tonsilectomies and hernia cases only.

Man Sentenced To 90 Days in $49 Cashbox Theft

A 39-year-old man was sentenced yesterday to serve 90 days in jail for stealing a cash box and the $49 it contained from the office in which his wife worked.

He was listed in Municipal Court papers as Frederick E. Harpold, of 1633 L st. nw. Sentencing was by Judge Thomas D. Quinn. The theft was from 806 17th st. nw.

According to Assistant United States Attorney Raymond Baker, Harpold's wife, June, 38, reported the theft to police after Harpold admitted the deed to her. The defendant had been drinking

Lane Appoints Group to Study Maryland Negro College Needs

Baltimore, Oct. 3 (AP).—Appointment of a seven-member commission to study higher education for Negroes in Maryland was announced by Governor Lane today.

Under terms of a resolution passed by the 1949 General Assembly, the commission will study, among other things, the relative merits of Morgan and Princess Anne Colleges—two existing Negro institutions in the State.

Members of the commission are: Walter N. Kirkman, director of the Medical and Chirurgical Faculty of Maryland; E. Asbury Davis, adviser to the City of Baltimore on financial matters; Joseph P. Healy, chairman of the Baltimore Commission on Racial Relations; James C. L. Anderson, Towson lawyer; Dr. Dwight O. W. Holmes, retired president of Morgan College; Dr. David E. Weglein, former superintendent of Baltimore public school, and Mrs. John W. Andrews of Crisfield, member of the Somerset County school board.

Prices Reduced On Crosley Cars

Cincinnati, Oct. 3 (AP).—Crosley Motors today announced price cuts ranging from $51 to $105 on its passenger and commercial automobiles. They are effective immediately.

"Our latest price reductions mean that all Crosley models will deliver anywhere in the United States at considerably under $1000, except the station wagon, which will sell for slightly more in distant West Coast markets because of freight charges," President Powel Crosley, jr., said.

Shephard Chest Head in Takoma

William H. Shephard, president of the Washington Missionary College, a Seventh-Day Adventist institution, has accepted the chairmanship of the Red Feather campaign in Takoma Park, Md.

He was appointed by Charles Graham, Silver Spring, campaign chairman for the eastern suburban area of Montgomery County.

Consider The Patient

The District Health Department's new certification requirement for Virginia doctors practicing in Washington is an effective means of illustrating an absurd situation. In the past the District has permitted Virginia physicians to treat their patients in Washington hospitals with merely a "borderline" certificate costing $1 a year. On the other hand, under a Virginia law on the books since 1933, District doctors practicing in nearby Virginia communities have had to pay an annual license fee of $50. Repeated efforts to establish reciprocity such as obtained between the District and Maryland have proved unavailing. Thus there was ample justification for the Health Department's retaliatory move to require a separate $1 certificate for each case treated here by Virginia doctors.

Probably this inconvenience will have the effect of stirring some action in the Virginia Medical Society and in the Legislature; nearby Virginia doctors need no convincing. But the quasi-embargo ought to be relaxed before patients become the victims of it. Nothing can be done until the Virginia Legislature convenes in January. However, the Health Department has made its point, and it ought now to lift the restriction with the clear understanding that it will be reimposed if Virginia authorities fail to act.

Evita's Hand

The newest act in the Buenos Aires comic opera is not precisely a coup de ballet by the heroine, Senora Eva Peron, but it certainly reflects her handiwork. Enrique Corominas, the Argentine Ambassador to the Organization of American States and currently the president of the OAS council, has been summarily removed much in the same way that Foreign Minister Bramuglia was bounced several months ago. The ouster seems to have been a product of the rivalry between Corominas and the Argentine Ambassador to the United States, Dr. Jeronimo Remorino, a gentleman solidly entrenched in Senora Peron's graces.

It would be invidious, to be sure, to compare Senor Corominas with Senor Bramuglia, who "resigned" after having a brush with Dr. Remorino. Senor Corominas usually has been a stanch pillar of inaction in the OAS, and he has not been above twisting the Yankee tail when he thought it would please the Peron gang. The rivalry with Dr. Remorino seems to come about in part, at least, over the publicity which Senor Corominas' position brought him. Nevertheless, the removal does reflect an intrigue worthy of the Cominform or the Court of Louis XIII in France, and it indicates the growing influence of the matriarchy in Buenos Aires' Casa Rosada.

Meanwhile, the Peron regime has pulled two new tricks designed to stifle opposition to the Argentine brand of totalitarianism—tricks in which Evita's hand also can be detected. Last week President Peron signed a bill making it a prison offense to show "disrespect" for government officials. Now the Peronistas also have asked for a law imposing such restrictions on the formation of new political parties as to make this almost impossible. Those who advocate closer relations with our "friend" in Argentina ought to take a good look at the Hitlerian repression they would indorse. This is a case in which Peron's actions are far more eloquent than his words.

Gerontic FTC

The swearing in of John Carson to be a member of the Federal Trade Commission last week should bring that agency some relief from its moribund condition of recent months, but there is still plenty of room for improvement. Commissioner Edwin L. Davis, who is 73 years of age, has been sick for several months. Commissioner William A. Ayres has attained the venerable age of 82, and, although he is said to be still one of the ablest men to have served on the board in recent years, a man of his age can scarcely be expected to keep up the pace of an alert and hard-working quasi-judicial board. A third member, Garland S. Ferguson, is a year beyond the age (70 years), at which the rank and file of commission employes are required to retire. This degree of gerontocracy is inevitably demoralizing to the commission's personnel.

Commissioner Ferguson also has the handicap of having failed to get senatorial confirmation for the position that he holds. His term expired in June, 1948, but he continues to hold his place by virtue of a provision in the law enabling him to serve until his successor is appointed and qualified. Does this mean that President Truman can keep a commissioner in office for the full seven years of an additional term by simply failing to name a successor? If so, Congress will obviously have to amend the law so as to avoid a thwarting of its plain intent.

Commissioner Lowell Mason has been renominated to serve another term. In considering his confirmation the Senate will doubtless take into account his efforts of last year to ridicule the views of his colleagues and, in various speeches around the country, to incite revolt against their orders. Even a crippled commission ought to have more respect from one of its members than this. It seems to us that it is about time for the President to give some thoughtful attention to the FTC with the object of giving it some of the vigor and new blood that President Roosevelt used to say were needed in the courts.

Chinese Realities

The record of Russian cynicism in relations to China is completed with the recognition of the Communist government as the government of China. Up till now the Russians have pursued a dual policy. Toward the Nationalist government the diplomacy has been studiously correct. Before the Communists got to Nanking, the Russian Embassy had moved to Canton, along with the vanguard of the Li Tsung-jen government. Soon afterward Russia's consulate general in Shanghai followed suit. This activity gave the appearance that the Russians were living up to their 1945 agreement to support the Nationalist government. It seemed as if they were doing so in order to throw dust in the eyes of the western governments. Actually the motive was very simple—the Russians were looking after their own imperial interests. While at Canton the Russians negotiated a radio concession in Sinkiang with the Nationalist authorities as if nothing amiss had happened. The same kind of policy ruled in Communist China. How much support the Communists have had from Russia is conjectural. Japanese arms they got from the Russians three years ago; they were, as the White Paper puts it, "conveniently abandoned." And there may be some Russian counsel at the elbow of Mao Tze-tung, though the proof is lacking. The only sure thing is that the Russians got tangible value received for anything they may have done for the Chinese Communists. The outstanding prize is a concession in Manchuria on top of what Russia got in virtue of the Yalta deal which makes all Manchuria virtually Russian territory.

Now there can be no more playing of both ends against the middle. Communist China, having seemingly secured the greater part of China, has set up a government, and Soviet Russia, faced with the double fact, has recognized it.

Russian policy has been skillful as well as cynical toward China-in-turmoil. This is due to the fact that the Russians got their fingers burned severely in the last civil irruption, in 1927, when Chiang Kai-shek came to power. The Nationalists leaned heavily on the Russians, and the Russians were not loathe to take open and leading parts in spearheading the revolution. Galens was the head of the military group, Borodin of the political group. But Chaing Kai-shek, when Nationalist victory seemed secure, sawed off the limb on which the Russians had planted themselves—and so neatly and so devastatingly that Stalin himself was almost toppled out of power in Moscow. This is the reason for the circumspection with which the Russians have conducted themselves in the present upset. The limb has been avoided like the plague. Russia's part in the success of Chinese communism has been a kind of nonintervention aimed at keeping the Russians ahead of the game, no matter what happened. Their policy owes its immediate success not only to this change of tactics but also to the fix in which the United States finds itself by reason of its overt intervention on the side of the Nationalists.

This country, unlike Russia, has not profited from experience. After the First World War there was precisely the same situation in Siberia. The man who was in charge of this intervention, Gen. William S. Graves, wrote an account of it in a book called America's Siberian Adventure, 1918-20, with a striking and memorable foreword by Newton D. Baker. It is a pity the book was not in the hands of the China interventionists before they committed the United States to another Siberian policy. "I was the agent for delivering arms and ammunition to Kolchak for use by this fighting force," wrote Graves. "I could not reconcile these acts with the principle of noninterference with the internal affairs of the Russian people . . . By this interference the United States helped to bolster up, by its military forces, a monarchistically inclined and unpopular government, of which the great mass of the people did not approve. The United States gained, by this act, the resentment of more than 90 percent of the people of Siberia."

The same mischief and the same reaction and the same failure—all have been repeated in China. It would be charitable to comfort ourselves with Baker's reflection on Siberia that the China situation "will always illustrate the eccentricities of a remote and irrational emanation from the central madness of a warring world." But the time has come to get over our paralysis and look the new realities in the face, for we shall assuredly have to live with them.

Atom Report

A report from the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy is long overdue. Its investigation of Senator Hickenlooper's extravagant charges of "incredible mismanagement" in the Atomic Energy Commission has been going on ever since June 1. Senator Hickenlooper has been accorded every courtesy and every opportunity to sustain his allegations, even at the cost of substantial interruption to the AEC's vital work. The chairman of the joint committee, Senator McMahon, has been extraordinarily patient; he consented to the continuation of hearings to a point when most members ceased to attend. In accordance with established committee practice, he and the vice chairman, Representative Durham, undertook the preparation of a draft report and sent confidential copies of it in galley proof form to their colleagues for criticism.

Premature disclosure of the tenor of this draft report seems plainly to have been the responsibility of Senator Knowland, who made public a letter denouncing the chairman for having drafted it. The impression is inescapable that Senator Knowland and his fellow Republicans on the committee are engaged in a kind of filibuster to prevent the publication of any report at all. Unable to support the Hickenlooper accusations or to present evidence of any breach of security on the part of the AEC, they apparently want to let the entire matter drop.

But to let it drop now would be at once a gross injustice to the members of the AEC and an abdication of responsibility to the public which is entitled to learn that the atomic energy program has been in safe and competent hands. Chairman McMahon is entirely justified in insisting that a report be made without additional delay. Minority members who disagree with the majority view will be quite at liberty, of course, to set forth their dissent, if they can find any material to substantiate it, in a minority report. David E. Lilienthal and his associates have already been pretty well cleared in the court of public opinion. They deserve the official clearance of the committee that has studied their conduct in office.

O. G. Villard

The crusader is now virtually extinct in American journalism. He belonged to an era when newspapers were more numerous and less encyclopedic, when they were less committed than now to the furnishings of all manner of entertainment for all manner of men, when their function was more narrowly conceived to be the reporting of news and the espousing of causes in which their editors believed. Oswald Garrison Villard, who died on Saturday at the age of 77, was, perhaps, the last great exponent of this tradition. He brought to his profession a crusading zeal inherited from his maternal grandfather, William Lloyd Garrison, "the great liberator," and a mordant pen propelled by native gifts of wit and passionate vigor.

When he was 25 years old he became the owner and editor of the New York Post. He made that daily and its weekly offspring, The Nation, powerfully liberal influences. He was a fighter against tyranny in every form. Thus he became a founder of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. He used his publications to expose scandal and corruption in the New York Legislature. He denounced indiscriminately the totalitarianisms of the right and of the left. But he was a fighter who abhorred the use of force. His militant pacifism led to his retirement from The Post after he had opposed American participation in the First World War and to a break in 1940 with those to whom he had relinquished editorship of The Nation because he could not go along with their support of the defense program of that period.

The internal contradiction between his militancy and his pacifism made Oswald Garrison Villard something of an anachronism in a century which twice has resorted to global war as the arbiter of international disputes. He could not countenance evil; yet he could not countenance armed resistance to it. He fell quite out of step, therefore, with the contemporary liberal movement and with all the contemporary leaders who carried the banner of liberalism into public life. His pacifism drove him into untenable, or at any rate, bitterly unpopular, positions. A stubborn consistency, rooted in inviolable integrity, kept him in these positions to the end. Ironically, it is as a fighter that he will be mourned and remembered.

GIRL

The sweet and mortal part of you
Comes walking down the ways we walk,
Doing the common things we do,
Talking the language that we talk;

Learning from earth the tricks of grace:
From birch, from flower that we know,
The oval tilting of your face,
The lithe flank's curving, languid, slow;

And wearing, in the eyes you wear,
Th blue of flowers this side of sky—
In verything, content to bear
The earthly name we call you by;

And having nothing in your look
Nostalgic of another clime
You knew as native, and forsook,
And still must seek again, in time . . .

Wherefore, the sweet and mortal part,
And the brief role that you rehearse,
I store away . . . in eyes . . . in heart . . .
In these grave syllables of verse.

Letters To The Editor

Communications must be addressed to the editor and must carry the complete name and street address of the writer, though pen names will be permitted at the editor's discretion. Letters of less than 200 words will be given preference, and all letters are subject to condensation. No communication can be returned.

"Silent Treatment"

The national heads of the American Legion and the Jewish War Veterans are to be congratulated for their recent statements condemning such violence as occurred at Peekskill, N. Y. The Washington Post, too, deserves commendation for the solid common sense of its September 25 editorial, "Silent Treatment," which made the point that if all citizens carry out the "quarantine treatment" of pro-Communist gatherings recommended by the veterans groups' commanders, the propaganda value of such sessions will collapse.

There was proof of this last weekend, in appearances by Paul Robeson in Chicago. Nobody bothered him. In the press, his meetings drew only one-paragraph items that said that nothing had happened. Contrast this with the columns and pages of publicity and propaganda material that the Robesonites garnered at Peekskill, and the sanity of the "quarantine treatment" is obvious.

The strength of the Communist Party in the United States is rapidly and steadily shrinking. Left alone, the gatherings of its adherents have no weight or influence. Only when anti-Communists mistakenly combine to deprive their sessions of freedom of speech and assembly do they mushroom into a twisted importance.

MARY ALICE BALDINGER,
Washington Representative, American Civil Liberties Union.

"Radical Pasts"

Your September 30 editorial, "Radical Pasts," seems quite significant in its treatment of the Leland Olds controversy.

Although your opening sentence shows no hesitancy in belittling the current Senate hearings on Leland Olds' fitness and sincerity, the editorial goes to great lengths to defend Mr. Olds' radical views. Is such an attitude in any way justified by the editorial policy of any worthwhile American newspaper? It should be remembered that, in this instance, the Senate is dealing with the ideological fitness of a public servant and not with the mere personal views of a private individual.

Whereas your editorial apologizes for Mr. Olds' writings agreeing with and being accepted by the Communist Daily Worker in 1922, there is nothing said about Mr. Olds' present views or any indication that the Daily Worker would oppose such present views. Thus your readers are left with the impression that Mr. Olds' present views are better left behind, even though the editorial makes the usual inept and fallacious attempt to state a defense by implication.

I would appreciate seeing an actual, factual statement by The Washington Post clearly setting forth Mr. Olds' present views.

Import Difficulties

We have taken notice of the September 29 letter written to you by Mr. James Loeb, jr., complaining about certain shipping and clearance charges on one case said to contain 12 china plates recently arrived from England and cleared at the port of Baltimore. This case weighed gross 42 pounds.

It is a common practice for tourists going to Europe to bring back with them in their own luggage various small purchases so as to avoid minimum charges for freight and other expenses. We are sure that the total expenses would have been no more if this shipment was at least three times greater than what it was. There is no way to avoid minimum charges on small parcels coming by freight, and the only remedy is for the tourist to bring them back with him.

We were willing to reduce our entry fee from $5 to $3 as a means of cooperating with this gentleman. We, naturally, have no control if a client decides to send a small shipment by freight. We received a communication from Mrs. Loeb during the time the shipment was in course of clearance wherein she sent us customs baggage declaration which would entitle this shipment to free entry without payment of any duty. We even went so far as to avoid the necessity of shipping this case in bond to Washington for customs clearance in Washington, which would have created some additional expense. We took into account the small value (for customs purposes the value was only $33 as declared in the entry), so you will understand we exercised diligence from a standpoint of cooperating with the owner of these goods.

Negroes In College

George Washington University lags in race relations, and this is to be regretted, for it makes the picture look bad for the District of Columbia. All of the colleges and universities that are in the District admit Negroes except George Washington University.

The present custom among the colleges in the North and in the Midwest, and in the West is to admit Negro students. Even in Oklahoma and Arkansas white and Negro students are studying in the same institutions. Yale, Harvard, Columbia, Chicago, etc. which are the larger schools in the country, not only have been accepting students, but also have a brighter vision. Negroes teach on their faculties.

Sudetenland Again

Dr. Franz Richter, a leader of the right wing in the newly organized German Bundestat, recently demanded the return to Germany of certain areas presently occupied by Russia and Poland, and of the Saar Basin and the Sudetenland area of Czechoslovakia. Although officially representing a comparatively small number of voters, Dr. Richter's thinking is probably representative of a large segment of the German population.

The area labeled "Sudetenland" by the Nazis and Richter-led Germans never belonged to Germany until wrested from Czechoslovakia under threat of war by Adolf Hitler. It now appears that to the German mind this region belongs to Germany and should be classed in the same category as the Russian-occupied eastern area. This possible demand by a new resurgent Germany was foreseen by the Czech regime of Benes which expelled all Germans who supported Konrad Henlein and the Nazis.

Dr. Richter's inclusion of this northern area of Czechoslovakia within the area of a new Germany emphaticaly indicates that a considerable number of Germans have retained their Nazi line of thought with respect to expansionist movements at the expense of neighboring nations.

Armed Intruders

With regard to your recent story about an attempted robbery and attack on an Arlington family, since The Washington Post editors are so against an ordinary civilian possesing firearms, perhaps The Washington Post will consider running a series of articles on various methods of disarming a person or persons seeking to enforce their demands at gun point.

As long as we have people with criminal tendencies among us, we should have recourse to some immediate aid besides neighbors who might not be there when we need them.

Economic Union With Britain

In his letter of September 8 Paul de Hevesy argued with forcible and perspicacious eloquence in favor of a customs and currency union between the British Commonwealth of Nations and the United States of America.

The inexorable logic of his argument demonstrated that, unless these two powerful groups of states voluntarily transformed themselves into an economic unity, they would become rivals for the conquest of foreign markets. Their economic rivalry would inevitably impair their political relations.

Since the preservation of peace now depends on a close and firm understanding between these two groups, the very thought of so insensate a rivalry arouses the deepest misgivings. The Pax Britamericana—the last hope of a distracted world—would be gravely imperiled.

Readily acknowledging the benefits that an economic union would confer, many sincere patriots, torn between inherited loyalty to their country and spiritual loyalty to the noble conception of universal peace, are yet apprehensive lest it might involve a political union and a consequent loss of sovereign independence. It should not, however, prove insuperably difficult to establish an Anglo-American economic union without touching the political institutions of the constituent states.

Did not the Latin monetary union that existed in Europe before 1914 maintain inviolate the sovereignty of countries such as Switzerland, France, Italy, and Spain? And was not the free-trading England of the nineteenth century associated in a virtual customs union with the other free-trading countries of the same period?

The paramount object should be to establish a free-trading union that would embrace not only the British Commonwealth of Nations and the United States of America but also any other suitably qualified state or group of states desirous of acceding to such an arrangement. Great Britain, the largest food-importing country in the world, should revolve in the same economic and financial orbit with the largest food-exporting countries, such as the United States and Canada. An ever-closer collaboration between the Anglo-American group and western Europe should be sedulously promoted.

As the present rulers of Russia could not be effectually dissuaded from creating a hostile world of their own, two rival worlds have already been brought into existence. This is bad enough. But to take the risk of an economic policy that would lead to the emergence of a third rival world would be finally to crush the hopes, feeble as they are, that sorely tried humanity cherishes of lasting peace and security.

Disaster In Steel

THE TRAGIC consequences of the steel strike can hardly be exaggerated. It may well mean the difference between a continued relatively high level of prosperity and a new dip toward recession and, perhaps, depression. Beyond this the shadow that it casts can darken the hopes for peace and security in the world.

Who wanted the strike, then? If you look at the circumstances, I think you have to say that Philip Murray, head of the CIO Steelworkers Union, did not want it.

When the President's fact-finding steel board declared that no wage increase was justified at this time but that the companies could pay the whole cost of a pension-social insurance system, Murray knew he would have a bad time with his locals. He immediately got telegrams from eight union locals saying they could not accept the board's terms.

There followed a meeting of the Steelworkers' executive council in Pittsburgh. For nearly five hours Murray talked to the top men representing the rank and file of the half million workers in the steel industry. In his quiet, soft-spoken voice with the Scottish burr, he pleaded with them. He said that it was essential to accept the board's recommendations because they have the force of public opinion behind them.

The consensus finally was that they would go along with Phil, if that was what he wanted. From that moment Murray knew that he could settle for nothing less than the full recommendation of the board. To take less would be to risk disintegration of the union.

IN THE background was the looming figure of his enemy, John L. Lewis. Lewis had wrested from many of the same steel companies that have held out against the steel board's recommendations a company-paid pension plan giving retired United Mine Workers $100 a month.

If the plan wasn't actuarially sound, as Lewis must have known that it wasn't, then he could strike to boost the ante of 20 cents a ton. That is what he is doing now. He has ordered part of the miners back to word with the arbitrary authority of a dictator.

The miners remaining on strike are those who serve the steel industry. So long as they refuse to mine the coal essential to steel, the strike of Murray's union is secondary in its effect.

It will be hard for Americans, every one of us certain to suffer from a prolonged conflict, to understand how such a tragedy could occur. In a speech last week, Agnes Meyer pointed out how many employers, in the years when labor was scarce, had been willing and even eager to pay the cost of pensions and social security. Some of these same employers had opposed a national old-age pension system providing adequate pensions for all on a fair and just basis.

But to give a minority of highly organized workers extra large pensions and insurance benefits, without any contribution from the workers themselves, is to create greater insecurity and frustration among those on the outside who have no such benefits. The response is immediate political pressure for radical proposals like the Townsend plan.

BUT THE steel board recommended company-financed pensions, and the tragedy is upon us. In the White House there is the deepest gloom. The strike has come—and when and how it will end no one in authority can foresee—just as the recent recession was ended and production was evening off at high levels.

In the White House is a firm conviction that the executives of the steel companies wanted the strike, or, at any rate, the view is that they were not reluctant to see a showdown. The showdown will compel the President to resort to the Taft-Hartley Act and therefore the steel executives, all Republicans, will be able to say that the law so hated by the labor leaders was the only salvation in a national crisis.

As viewed from the White House, the Taft-Hartley emergency provisions cannot be invoked until there is a real and serious emergency. Presumably that would not be until the steel workers had been on strike for several weeks, by which time the automobile plants and probably the electrical manufacturing industry would also be shut down.

By that time the damage to the economy would be done. Production and employment would begin to turn downward. We should all of us soon feel the pinch. If that happens, and there seems every likelihood of it happening, no amount of explaining by either side is going to make the average citizen understand why disaster was invited down upon the country.

Doomed Elms

If there no way to save Washington's beautiful trees that are fast going under the axe?

There seems to be no valid reason to cut the fine old elms at Q and Wisconsin, when a simple rerouting of the two bus lines for a few blocks would divert much of the traffic, with resultant congestion, from this intersection.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

What Can Now Be Done?

THERE has been an interesting development in the Soviet position since the Baruch-Gromyko exchanges. Then the Russians were primarily concerned with the growing American stockpile of atomic bombs. At one point—in February, 1947—Mr. Gromyko had got so far as to say that he would accept virtually all of Mr. Baruch's principles, including a recognition that the right of self-defense under Article 51 was not subject to the veto. But first, Mr. Gromyko insisted, the American stockpile of "manufactured atomic weapons and of unfinished atomic weapons" had to be destroyed.

Lippmann

Mr. Vishinsky spoke to the General Assembly on Friday, September 23, a few hours after the President published the news that the Russians had succeeded in exploding a bomb. Whereas Mr. Gromyko in 1946-47 was most insistent on destroying the American stockpile, Mr. Vishinsky in 1949 is now offering to destroy two stockpiles. That, quite obviously, is because the Russians are on the way to having a stockpile of their own.

THE CONTROLLING fact has always been the stockpile of bombs. Mr. Baruch insisted on keeping our stockpile while international control was being set up and tested. Mr. Gromyko wanted to destroy the American stockpile before agreeing to international control. Now that there is to be a Russian stockpile, Mr. Vishinsky is proposing to outlaw the bomb by an agreement among the two powers both of whom, even if they destroyed their stockpiles, would still have the means to make the bombs.

What kind of agreement could that be? Mr. Vishinsky said again what Stalin has said before—an agreement like that which "condemned the use for military purposes of poison gas." Now the treaty of 1922 which prohibited "the use in war" of poison gas is pertinent to the atomic bomb problem on three points: one, it did not attempt to set up any system of inspection; two, it did not place any limitation on the manufacture and possession of poison gas; three, it was observed by all the principal belligerents, including Hitler himself, during the second World War.

WHY was it observed, though there was no system of inspection and control, and no international machinery of enforcement? It was observed because all the belligerents had poison gas, and therefore none of them dared to use it.

The status of atomic weapons now has a certain resemblance to that of poison gas in 1922, and in an unprejudiced and objective view we must admit that there is realism in the Russian argument that the poison gas treaty is a precedent. For the only agreement which can now be reached is one essentially like the poison gas treaty—an agreement by governments which retain possession of atomic weapons, or at least the means to manufacture them, but pledge themselves not to use them in war, except in retaliation. It is illusory to suppose that the American and the Russian manufacturing plants will be destroyed—or that "inspection" which inspects anything of vital military importance will be conceded by anyone. But an agreement not to be the first user of the bomb could probably be reached if we wished it—and if the agreement was observed in war, it would be because of the fear of reprisal.

THE PARAMOUNT question is whether an agreement of this kind should be made before there has been a settlement in Europe which brings about the withdrawal of the Russian army to the borders of the Soviet Union. On balance it would probably be wiser to begin now to negotiate a treaty on the poison gas model but not to ratify it until an Austrian and a German treaty have been ratified and executed. For some relatively short time—a few brief years at best—the American atomic power will continue to be somewhat, though not decisively greater, than the Russian. Our superiority will lie in the fact that the United States is less vulnerable than Russia and has more bombs and greater striking power.

This advantage is an asset, though a wasting asset, in the diplomatic bargaining for treaties to settle the Second World War. The advantage should be used for what it is worth while it lasts and before it disappears. We should not do again what Mr. Baruch did in 1946, which was to overestimate his bargaining power—on the mistaken notion that the American monopoly would last many more years—and thus to ask for so much that he got nothing at all, while the Russians went quietly and firmly ahead to break the American monopoly.

Our bargaining power today in military terms is less than it was then. For the monopoly has been ended, and the Russians now have or will very soon have the power to neutralize American offensive power by the threat of the combined force of their army and their atomic weapons against their immediate neighbors.

Plotting Mary's Adventures

The Washington Post

One Phi Bete Makes Money, It Says Here

Blasting the myth that Phi Beta Kappas make only with the brains and never with the bucks is the case of Allen Saunders, comic-strip author, who for writing a mere 1000 words a week earns a salary verging on $100,000 a year.

The 50-year-old, bespectacled, pipe-smoking former professor of English, who still looks more like a faculty member than a comic-strip man, is one of the fascinating personalities among the more than 50 famous cartoonists now here to push the sale of U. S. Savings Bonds.

Saunders, who writes the script for "Mary Worth" and "Steve Roper" appearing in The Washington Post and several hundred other papers, is doubtless the top Phi Bete in the business. He may also be the only one who holds a master's degree from the University of Chicago. He describes himself as "the only Rotarian in the world who writes for the comics."

57,000,000 Readers

His 1000 weekly words are read by at least 57,000,000 persons a day. The fact that he has one of the largest reading audiences of any writer in world history sometimes overwhelms—not to say, terrifies—Saunders himself.

This terror is further invoked by the numerous letters received from readers asking Mary Worth for advice on their personal problems. In the strip, Mary dispenses quiet, homespun philosophy, such as: "You can always tell good water by the path that is worn to the well," a saying that will appear next January and the disclosure of which here we hope will teach comic-strip readers to glance at the news columns now and then, too.

"Mary Worth" is drawn by Ken Ernst, a 31-year-old artist who was also in town yesterday and who was the youngest major comic-strip artist in the business when he took over the work eight years ago. Saunders lives in Toledo, Ernst in Chicago, a situation that notably increases the revenue of the telephone company.

Heavy Research

The 1000 words a week Saunders turns out for "Mary Worth" and "Steve Roper" hardly indicate the work Saunders puts into the strips. His research is monumental.

"Mary Worth" has as a base the intricacies of some particular field of work. In its time it has taken up the department-store, dance band, advertising agency, model agency, interior decorating, Government girl and currently the greeting card business.

Yesterday Saunders was toting around a reference work entitled "Technique of Fitting Contact Lenses."

Starting in Janury, "Mary Worth" will switch over to a sequence dealing with an advertising agency the principal account of which is a manufacturer of contact lenses. Incidentally, Brick Riley (nee Brick Bricker), perhaps the most popular character aside from Mary the strip has ever had, will return to it during this sequence.

Background of "Steve Roper" is equally well-documented. Photostats of the 16-week counterfeiting sequence were approved beforehand by the Secret Service. During its running the Treasury Department cracked one of the country's biggest counterfeiting rings, and one story is that the tip on the gang came from a movie cashier who had seen counterfeiting methods exposed in the comic strip. While in Washington, Saunders plans to visit the FBI for further technical material for "Steve Roper."

Strips Censored

Saunders takes the responsibility of the comic-strip author with great seriousness. He spends an appreciable amount of his time lecturing before women's clubs, DAR groups and the like.

The newspaper comic strip, he points out, is censored at least four different times—by the artist and author, the syndicate, the newspaper editor and the reader.

Saunders yesterday gave this secret of doing a comic strip: "You tell what happened yesterday, show what's happening today, and hint that something far more interesting is to happen tomorrow."

And for all fans of "Rex Morgan, M. D.," another strip appearing in The Post, this information:

It has frequently been stated that a practicing physician checks this script for medical authenticity.

Yesterday, Saunders, who is also continuity editor for Publishers Syndicate, which handles the script, revealed that it is actually written—not just checked—by a practicing Ohio physician. This doctor, who remains unrevealed for ethical reasons, is a psychiatrist, Saunders said.

unable to get seats in the first show.

The audience witnessed such famed cartoonists as these actually sketching their celebrated brain children:

Ham Fisher of "Joe Palooka," Bill Holman of "Smokey Stover," Ken Ernst of "Mary Worth," Lank Leonard of "Mickey Finn," George Wunder of "Terry and the Pirates" and Caniff.

Opening the ceremonies, Secretary Snyder told the audience:

"It has been my privilege to share a speaker's table with some very famous figures of our day, but I think that I have been in few 'halls of fame' that could compare with this gathering tonight."

"Truthfully, there is only one artist I know whose works are more eagerly collected by Americans, and that is the man who engraves the portraits on United States currency. I trust you will not think it immodest for me to mention that this artist works for the United States Treasury.

"But as a matter of fact, so do these distinguished cartoonists. They are volunteer workers in the United States Savings Bond program, who have been devoting their time and talents to this cause since its beginning."

Caniff, replying for the cartoonists, asserted, "We are glad to feel the hand of history upon us when we come to Washington."

"I am not so over-awed by this invitation to appear in the Library of Congress," the creator of "Steve Canyon" averred. "All these millions of books that I should like to have read and never will—I can snap my fingers at them now that I know that man turned to comic art thousands of years before he turned to the printed word to express himself.

"And today, man still turns first to the comics. He's not being lowbrow; he's repeating the pattern of the race."

The exhibit, "20,000 Years of Comics," traces the history of comic art from the cave man to modern times. It may be viewed by the public today and Wednesday. Between scheduled events, the cartoonists will be on hand at the exhibit to greet followers of their creations.

Lottery Plan Is Criticized By Marbury

In convening the new grand jury for Prince Georges County, Judge Charles C. Marbury yesterday criticized the April term grand jury's suggestion for a State lottery.

"It is just as logical to legalize some forms of gambling because of the difficulty in enforcing the law as it is to legalize larceny . . . or disorderly conduct," said the County Circuit Court judge.

Judge Marbury told the newly sworn October term grand jury it is "in nowise bound" by the April term grand jury report. He added: "It may be well for you to reconsider and reexamine the same subject."

The April term jury, in a report September 15, said it believed gambling in the county was down to an "almost irreducible minimum." It suggested a State lottery to reduce taxes and to help "satisfy the inherent gambling instincts of those who now patronize illegal operations."

Judge Marbury told the new jury to "consider whether revenue which might be produced by way of reduction of taxes would not be offset by the petty temptation to graft and violations of other forms of gambling law."

"You might consider whether it is not begging the question to say that because there is gambling of the petty type and recognizing that it is difficult to enforce the laws against it that we should therefore legalize it," Judge Marbury said.

"You might consider the history of our country and whether we have reached our present greatness through gambling."

As to other phases of the earlier jury's report which found little gambling in the county, Judge Marbury said it is "heartening, and if true it is because of the alertness of the law enforcement officers and the grand jury."

Kent R. Mullikin, Washington insurance and mortgage loan man, of Laurel, Md., was named foreman of the new jury.

Johnson Asks Country to Back Chest

The two top men in the Department of Defense led off the advance gifts solicitation of the 1950 Community Chest campaign here with their pledges yesterday and called on all Americans to contribute in the drive for funds.

Secretary of Defense Louis A. Johnson and Undersecretary Stephen Early met with the advance gifts division solicitors, headed by Col. Paul A. Griffith, an assistant secretary, who is chairman of the Red Feather drive in the department.

"The Armed Forces' fundamental interests," Johnson said, "are identical with those of the civic community. The welfare of every community in the United States, large and small, is a matter of concern to the Department of Defense.

"The Community Chest is concerned with the internal security of the country. We are charged with the external security. The Department of Defense desires to contriubte as fully as possible to the utilization of the Nation's resources, both human and material, and to all things that promote welfare of the people. This is one of our more effective expressions of democracy in action."

5 More Days Given Lusk in Veterans' Bankruptcy Suit

Richard S. Lusk, developer of Woodlawn Manor subdivision in Fairfax County, yesterday was granted five more days in which to answer involuntary bankruptcy proceedings filed by four veterans who charge they have received no return from deposits on new homes.

Judge Albert V. Bryan of the United States District Court at Alexandria granted the extension after Lusk's attorney said he would be unable to prepare an answer by yesterday's scheduled deadline. The attorney, Neville G. Hall, jr., told Judge Bryan he had had no opportunity to consult with his client, since Lusk is out of the city.

The new deadline has been set for Saturday.

Besides being named in the bankruptcy proceedings, Lusk has been indicated by a Fairfax County grand jury on a charge of larceny by embezzlement. The complainant is Channing L. Pace, 3100 S. Hill st., Arlington, who charged he paid Lusk $3000 as a deposit on a house that never has been completed.

Montgomery Tops In Liquor Revenue

The Montgomery County Liquor Dispensary system turns over more revenue to the Montgomery County Council than all the other seven Maryland counties under the State's monopoly system, the Silver Spring Women's Democratic Club was told last night.

Charles Buscher, manager of the county system, told the group that without the revenue gained from county liquor sales, taxes would have to be increased or services curtailed.

The total revenue for 1948 from the liquor dispensary system was $1,331,000, he said. The net profit, he said, was $403,235.

The meeting was held at Jesup Blair Community House in Silver Spring.

Falls Church School Board Asks $1,000,000

The Falls Church school board will confer at 8 p. m. today with Mayor Albert M. Orme and the city council on possibility of a million-dollar school bond issue.

The board will ask the council at the closed session "to what extent the council will support a school bond issue," according to Mrs. Mark Regan, school board chairman. The regular open meeting of the school board is scheduled for 8 p. m. Wednesday in the board's offices at 1057 W. Broad st.

Man Held for Jury In Watch Theft, $240 in Bethesda

Wilbur M. Cleveland, 20, of Fairmont Heights, Md., was held for action of the grand jury yesterday in Bethesda Police Court on a charge of larceny resulting from theft of $240 in cash and a watch from a construction shed in the 7100 block of Western ave., Bethesda.

Cleveland was arrested September 15 by Montgomery County police after the money was found inside the hub caps of his truck and the watch in a ditch near the construction job where he was employed.

Sanford L. Martin, of 24 Hamilton st. ne., a carpenter on the job, testified he had left the money and watch on a stove in the shed and that it was gone when he returned.

Fire Budget Calls For Bigger Force

Of D. C. Chiefs

2 Senators Seek Speedy Slum Action

Senator Sparkman (D., Ala.) this week will make a "strong personal" appeal to the Commissioners for approval of a Federally-indorsed application for construction of 4000 low-rent housing units here during the next two years.

The chairman of the Senate Housing subcommittee said last night that he expected Senator Flanders (R., Vt.) to join him in seeking quick District Building action before both leave Thursday on a committee study of private cooperative housing in Europe.

Sparkman and Ihlder Confer

Senator Flanders, a key figure in the Washington housing picture, was out of town yesterday.

Senator Sparkman made the announcement following a Capitol Hill conference with John Ihlder, executive director of National Capital Housing Authority, the agency which will direct construction of the new housing units, if and when the city heads approve.

The Senator said he had called Ihlder for a progress report on whatever action local authorities have taken under the recently passed National Housing Act.

Up to Commissioners

Since the Public Housing Administration has already allocated 4000 units to Washington and approved a preliminary planning loan of 500,000, the next step rests with the Commissioners.

Under the new law, the city heads must approve a so-called "cooperative agreement," pledging the city to raze within five years approximately the same number of existing substandard family units as the total of new loct-cost dwellings built. The city heads must also approve the request for the preliminary loan and agree to grant tax exemption to the new units in lieu of payments.

The cooperative agreement, just recently put in final form by PHA, is expected to be presented to the Commissioners in the near future.

Addition of 178 men to the District Fire Department to clear the way for a 60-hour work week instead of the present 72 hours was asked yesterday by Fire Chief J. A. Mayhew in budget requests.

He made the request in his proposed departmental budget for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1950, and asked $592,615 to pay the new men. Congress already had authorized a cut in the work week, in effect here since 1918, within 180 days after necessary funds become available.

New Deputy Chief

The 178 men include an additional deputy chief (two now), four battalion chiefs (18 now), 23 sergeants (51 now) and 150 privates.

Originally the department asked for funds to add 201 men to the force, but this was cut back recently after conferences between department officers and the city budget office. The request was reduced by 12 sergeants and 11 privates.

In addition, the Commissioners were asked to promote Deputy Fire Marshal Roy Warfield from captain to battalion chief, an increase of $1200 in salary.

$5,065,886 to Operate

A total of $5,065,886 was asked for departmental operating expenses, compared with a present budget of $3,751,242. A request for $263,000 in capital outlay funds was asked for construction of a new fire engine house on a site previously acquired at 49th and East Capital sts. se.

The department already has a fund of $41,347 for the project available from 1949. No capital outlay was requested in 1950. The building has been sought to provide protection for the rapidly growing sections of Northeast and Southeast.

Replacement of eight pumpers, an aerial truck and a water tower was asked and $24,000 was requested to move the department's radio station WDCS to a higher frequency as directed by the Federal Communications Commission.

Hearing Ordered On Departmental Budget Requests

A public hearing on the requests of department heads for 139 million dollars to operate the District during fiscal 1951 will be held by the Commissioners at 10 a. m., October 18.

G. M. Thornett, secretary to the Board of Commissioners, said that the hearing will give citizens a chance to express their views on the budget requests and to present recommendations.

Representatives of organizations who plan to speak at the hearings must submit their names, addresses and telephone numbers by October 14, Thornett said. They will be notified as to when they will be scheduled to speak.

Western Maryland R. R. Net Slumps in Month

Baltimore, Oct. 3 (AP).—The Western Maryland Railway reported today that curtailed activity in the coal fields cut its net income to $363,426 in August, as compared with $812,828 in August last year.

The railroad reported $3,194,166 in net income for the first eight months of 1949, down almost a million from its net for the comparable period of 1948.

Gasoline Leaks, Explosion Rocks N. Y. West Side

New York, Oct. 3 (AP).—Gasoline overflowed from a tank-truck delivery vehicle and exploded today, wrecking a five-story garage, rocking Manhattan's West Side, injuring 14 persons and damaging 75 automobiles.

The blast sent flying glass through the air for blocks around. Apartment dwellers in the area fled their homes.

A truck driver three blocks away was hurled from his cab. The concussion bowled a man across a nearby street. A girl was blown from her bed in the neighborhood of the garage at 148-50 West 20th st.

Most seriously injured of the victims was Morris Aughtman, 31, a garage worker. Assistant Fire Marshal John Gribben said Aughtman saw gasoline overflowing as the tank-truck was delivering gas.

"He was trying to wash the gasoline down a drain with water when the explosion came," Gribben said.

Grocer Cleared Of Charges in Death of Boy

Edward Corman, 59-year-old grocer of 1507 Varnum st. nw., yesterday was cleared of manslaughter and reckless driving charges in the traffic death of 5-year-old Falco Bruno, 6014 State st., North Englewood, Md.

Trial Magistrate Arthur P. Owens of Hyattsville Police Court, freed Corman at a preliminary hearing after hearing evidence the child ran into the side of Corman's car last Wednesday in front of the child's home, which is near Cheverly, Md.

Corman took the child to Prince Georges General Hospital where he was pronounced dead on arrival. He was the son of Nick Bruno, tile setter, and Mrs. Rose Bruno who have four other youngsters.

Installment Plan Credit Hits New Peak

The volume of installment plan credit rose to a new record high of 9613 million dollars at the start of September. The total increased 282 million dollars in August, second month month after the dropping of credit controls.

The Federal Reserve Board, reporting this yesterday, said total consumer credit also reached a new high of $16,452,000,000 after a 265-million-dollar gain in August.

Total consumer credit includes several noninstallment items, among them charge accounts, the only major type of credit to show a decline during August.

The total amount of consumer debt oustanding at the start of August was one-tenth more than a year earlier, the Reserve Board noted.

Biggest increase in August came in installment credit on automobile purchases. This expanded 157 million dollars to a 2767-million-dollar total. Installment credit on other items—furniture, refrigerators, television sets, etc.—increased 63 million dollars to a 2462-million-dollar total.

Suspect Claims $445 In Pocket as Own

A suspected housebreaker found hiding under a table at the Old New Orleans Restaurant early yesterday told police the $445 in his pocket was his "life savings."

The suspect, Herbert E. Lipschultz, 24, of 5518 4th st. nw., was arrested by Police Pvts. Thomas B. Basnight in the restaurant after a burglar alarm had sounded at 1:45 a. m.

Basnight quoted Lipschultz as saying he had garnered $9 earlier from 1210 18th st. nw., and $2 from 1212 18th st. nw.

Later police reported complaints from both addresses that the premises had been entered.

Arraigned before Municipal Court Judge Thomas D. Quinn, Lipschultz was held in $5000 bond for the grand jury on a housebreaking charge.

Private Basnight with Pvt. L. G. Dragh in March, 1948, shared the first "policeman of the month" award for rescuing a woman from a fire.

A Child's View Of Adult Horror

By Richard L. Coe

A BRILLIANT HORROR film has arrived at the Trans-Lux—"The Fallen Idol."

This thoroughly engrossing English picture is by Graham Greene and is produced and directed by Carol Reed, both masters of story-telling. And the playing of 8-year-old Bobby Henrey in the leading role is a sheer marvel.

The story concerns a small boy, the son of an Ambassador stationed in London, who stumbles on a love affair between the embassy butler, whom he worships, and a shy, pretty typist. The butler's housekeeper-wife, who is a self-righteous and hated woman, discovers the secret, too, and her violent death appears to be murder.

Throughout this exceptional picture, the focus is from the child's viewpoint. Of the critical moment the audience is fully aware, but so skillfully has the writer-director team employed the child's eyes that we conceive it through the terror and torment in the child's mind.

This has been done in numberless ways. The child is recognized as an aware human being, not simply a pint-sized stock figure. The words and phrases he overhears become a part of his consciousness; he acts on them, as children do, not as adults prefer to think children do. The child takes in his impressions and stacks them up against his own experiences.

From a Child's Eye

Visually, the camera always sees other people from the level of a child's eyes. Aurally, we are amused by some of the conversation fragments he picks up, amused from our adult knowledge, but always we are made to understand how they must seem to the boy.

How the quirks of fate make it possible for a just denouement but at the same time make total confusion in the child's mind, is brilliantly conveyed. That it has been an accident, we of the audience know. That the patient, understanding butler must always be guilty in the child's mind, we also know—"The Fallen Idol."

As I say, the Henrey child is a sheer marvel, taking Reed's patient direction and Greene's gripping words for their fullest value. His boylike understanding of what it means to share a secret (all the adults offer him secrets for silence), his puzzling over relationships he doesn't understand, his bewilderment that truth can mean different things and his trapped exhaustion are all so astutely conveyed that you live within him as you watch this exceptional film.

From the first scene, the atmosphere is unerringly conveyed: the large house, the loneliness of the young boy for his absent parents, his affection for his pet snake, his horror at its fate, his childlike enjoyment of a terrifying hide and seek game double your normal pulse.

Complete Celluloid Command

Remarkable as the Henrey boy's performance must be, the triumph of "The Fallen Idol" stems from the tempered heat of author and director in unfolding their story. Here is complete command of celluloid; Greene and Reed have known exactly what sort of muted terror they wished to convey and they've aimed accurately at all times.

The cast is precise, especially the perfect understanding of the butler's plight by Ralph Richardson. Michele Morgan is the girl he loves and Sonia Dresdel, a London stage favorite, is his enraged wife.

But at all times we see them as they must appear to the boy; they are not acting to us, but to him, creating the figures as they appear to his only partially understanding eyes.

It's been a long while since a picture of this stature and skill has arrived. By all means, do not miss "The Fallen Idol." You'll be fascinated from start to finish.

U. S.-Soviet War Not Inevitable Despite Clashing Ways of Life, Navy Secretary Says

"The fact that communism is completely opposed to our way of life does not of itself mean that war between the United States and the Soviet Union is inevitable," Secretary of the Navy Francis P. Matthews said last night.

The Secretary made this observation as he addressed the opening all Town Hall meetitng sponsored by the Washington General Assembly, Fourth Degree, Knights of Columbus, held in Gonzaga Auditorium.

Comparing the American system with that of Russia, Matthews said: "Where two systems differ so profoundly we must expect conflict . . . in the long run we may hope that this evil system will collapse of its own weight. But in the meantime . . . we must accept a state of tension as normal . . ."

At the same time, Matthews urged that Germany be permitted to redevelop to the fullest extent its economic resources—with the proviso that she be banned from owning and flying aircraft.

"With this safeguard, it is part of common sense to let German skill in industry aid in rebuilding and strengthening Europe," the Secretary asserted.

Carroll's Prayer Read

The most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington, followed Matthews on the speaker's platform. He remarked on the large number of college students among the crowd of 1200 present.

Father Neil Gargan, president of Gonzaga High School, read Archbishop Carroll's prayer for the security of the United States, first delivered when the Nation was young. Archbishop Carroll was the first Catholic Bishop of Baltimore.

Others who spoke briefly included Shane MacCarthy, general chairman of the meetings, and John J. Eustace, faithful navigator of the Washington General Assembly, Fourth Degree, Knights of Columbus.

The Town Hall meetings will be held the first Monday in each month, excepting January, through May.

'Coma' Plea Vain

Man Jailed 6 Months in Check Case

Thurston M. McIntosh, 30, of no fixed address, was sentenced to six months in Arlington Jail yesterday for passing a bad check, despite his plea he was in a diabetic coma when he admitted the offense to Arlington Detective John Wise.

McIntosh, who said he was a plumber and steam fitter, pleaded not guilty in Arlington County Court to the charge of passing the check for $49.12. The check, signed "Thomas Martin," was given on April 21 to S. B. Gentle, 1712 11th st. se., owner of Bobb's Hardware Store at 5803 Lee hwy. McIntosh, police said, purchased $2 worth of tools and received $47.19 in cash.

Wise testified that McIntosh admitted passing the check when questioned at Rockville, while in Montgomery County jail, following his arrest in that county.

Though no medical testimony was offered by the defense, McIntosh told the court he was a diabetic, and lack of insulin "leaves your mind open to suggestion." He said he was in such a state when Wise talked to him.

Under cross examination by Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney Paul E. Brown he admitted two convictions in Washington, one for robbery in 1939, and one on a bad check charge in 1947.

Wirt Home In Arlington Ransacked

Half a roast beef, a pair of new flannel trousers and $400 worth of jewelry were among the items taken by a thief Sunday after he broke into the home of Arlington Director of Public Service Richard M. Wirt, police reported yesterday.

Also taken were $30 to $40 in cash, a black and white plaid sport coat, and three cartons of cigarettes. Wirt lives at 1712 N. Hartford st., Arlington. He and his wife were visiting from 5 p. m. to midnight Sunday, police said.

Wirt said the burglar, who apparently entered by a back door, rummaged through bureau drawers throughout the house.

6 Falls Church Boys Confess Housebreaking

Six Falls Church boys, from 11 to 16 years of age, have admitted taking part in at least one of three recent housebreakings in the Falls Church area, police said yesterday.

Two of the boys, both 12, were discovered Sunday ransacking the 211 Grille on South Washington blvd., near Broad st., by owner Charles Maimone, according to Falls Church Police Lieut. Edward Simpson.

The boys told police they had worn rubber gloves to eliminate fingerprints when they entered by the skylight about 2 p. m. About $14 in cash plus a .22-caliber automatic pistol belonging to Maimone were recovered in the boys' possession, Simpson said. He said they admitted drinking beer on the premises.

The two youths, Simpson said, also admitted participation in a recent theft of candles and wine from the Falls (Episcopal) Church, and in a vandalism on a vacant house near Hillwood Square, just outside Falls Church, which was damaged to the extent of about $3000.

The 12-year-olds implicated the four other boys, Simpson said. The others, he said, confessed on questioning that they had taken part in an September 25 housebreaking at the 211 Grille. A $75 engagement ring, 15 cartoons of cigarettes, several boxes of cigars and a couple of cases of beer were reported missing on that occasion, police said.

All six boys, now in custody of their parents, will be turned over to Fairfax authorities, Simpson said.

College Goes Medieval

Providence, Rhode Island (U.P.)—Brown University will build a medieval-like moat around its two-million-dollar dormitory quadrangle to protect students from thieves. Campus policemen will guard the three bridges around the moat and thus, it is hoped, prevent thieves from geting their usual $30,000 yearly in loot.

Many Run for Office

Boston (U.P.).—Some Massachusetts citizens will have to take plenty of time to vote in the municipal elections in November. So many candidates are running for office that the ballot in Worcester will be 5 feet long—and in Medford, 6 feet.

One Way to Win

Jackson, Mich. (U.P.).—Paul Anderson, cafe operator, complained to police that two teen-age boys bored a hole in a pin-ball machine to insert a long wire and register fake wins.

Fun for Travelers

New York (U.P.).—Music, news and train information will be presented soon over the loudspeaker in the Grand Central Railroad station. A few commercials also will be salted in to help defray broadcast expenses.

Bank Earnings Up 14% Here, 6% in U. S.

By S. Oliver Goodman

National banks in Washington showed a 14-percent increase in net operating earnings for the first six months this year over the same 1948 period, as compared with a 6-percent average increase throughout the country.

The Treasury Department yesterday reported that national banks showed net operating earnings of 370 million dollars in the first half, a gain of 23 million dollars.

In Washington, national banks reported net operating earnings of $2,492,000 for the same period against $2,180,000 last year.

Comptroller of Currency Preston Delano said that on June 30 there were 4993 national banks in operation, a decrease of 11 banks during the 12 months.

Cash dividends declared on banks common and preferred stocks totaled 97 million dollars in comparison with 92 million in the first half of 1948. The annual rate of cash dividends, Delano added, was 3.32 percent of capital funds and was 38.96 percent of the net profits available. The remaining 61.04 percent of net profits, or 152 million dollars, was retained by the banks in their capital accounts.

During the six months, operating expenses were 605 million dollars (excluding income taxes) as against 571 million dollars in the like 1948 period. Principal operating costs were 292 million dollars for salaries and wages of officers and employes, an increase of 19 million over the first half of 1948, and 91 million dollars for interest on time deposits, an increase of four million dollars.

LOADINGS: Railroad carloadings in the final 1949 quarter will be 4.7 per cent lower in this region than in the like 1948 period, the Atlantic States Shippers Advisory Board estimated last night. Shipments are expected to total 1,057,457 carloads, compared to 1,109,969 during the last 1948 quarter. States comprising the board's territory include the District of Columbia, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, New York, New Jersey and Delaware. Nationally, carloadings are expected to be 8.7 percent lower for the fourth quarter.

ELECTIONS: Chairmen of various sections of the Merchants & Manufacturers Association have been elected, according to Edward D. Shaw, association executive secretary, with following results:

Ladies' wear stores division—M. F. Marcus of L. Frank & Co., succeeding Arthur J. Rosenblatt.

Wholesale grocers division—J. Edward Dyer of J. E. Dyer & Co., succeeding R. F. Dyer.

Furniture division—Arthur B. Curtis of Curtis Bros. Furniture Co., succeeding W. Wilberg.

Building supply division—Warren S. Gruber of Hudson Supply & Equipment Co., succeeding B. C. Thomson.

Following have been reelected chairmen: Furriers division—Dewey Zirkin of H. Zirken & Sons, Inc.

Jewelers division—Arthur J. Sundlun of A. Kahn, Inc.

Ice cream manufacturers division—Humphrey Daniel of Carry Ice Cream Co.

Coal division—Patrick A. Deck of Padeley & Co.

OPTIMISTIC: September showed the best increases in production since last October, the National Association of Purchasing Agents reported. Fully 50 percent of the companies reporting indicated increased production schedules, against only 10 percent showing declines. Purchasing agents' opinions could be rated as optimistic, the committee said, "were it not for the shadows of gloom cast over the general business picture by present strikes and the possibility of others."

ODD LOTS: Classes of the Life Underwriters Training Council are scheduled to start November 1 in the Acacia Mutual building . . . The Amott-Baker realty bond price index advanced to $752 per $1000 bond on September 30 from $738 on August 31 . . . Central Railroad of New Jersey has emerged officially from 10 years of bankruptcy and is now being operated by its officials instead of court-appointed trustees . . . Federal Reserve Board reported total consumer credit at the start of September reached a new high of $16,452,000,000, after a 265-million gain in August . . . Kaiser-Frazer auto factory at Willow Run, Mich., resumed operations yesterday after "a five-day shutdown for inventory adjustment."

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Oct. 3 (AP).—Soybeans led a strong upward surge in grains on the Board of Trade today. At the close gains in beans extended to more than 3 cents, in wheat to more than 2 cents and in corn and rye to more than 1 cent.

The market got off to a very slow start. Its major feature was a lack of selling pressure. That characterized the trade all day, and when several bursts of buying hit the pits it was the lack of offerings which partly accounted for fairly substantial gains.

Wheat closed ¾ to 2¼ higher, corn was 1¾ to 1⅞ higher, oats were ⅛ to ¾ higher, rye was ½ to 1¾ higher, soybeans were 2¼ to 3½ higher, and lard was 5 to 18 cents a hundred pounds higher.

Nats Drop Kuhel; 'We Had to Make Change' Says Griff; Baugh's Three Touchdown Passes Sink Steelers, 27-14

Tough One to Pick

Maryland Tackles Michigan State

MARYLAND AT MICHIGAN STATE. What can Coach Jim Tatum's big Terrapins do with the rugged Staters who held Michigan University to a 7-3 victory at the start of the season?

That game and many others present difficult problems in The Washington Post's Pick-the-Winners football contest this week.

As in previous seasons, this year's contest will reward those who know their teams and are students of the game. Read closely accounts of games throughout the season. Remember, this is a game of skill.

Each week the winner of the contest will receive two tickets to the Army-Navy game in Philadelphia, November 26, and an all-expenses-paid trip to this game for two persons.

The person submitting the most accurate entry each week also will receive four tickets to a major college or professional game in this area. The Washington Post will select this game.

The contest each week will include 21 major colleges games. Each contestant will select the winner (or tie) of 20 of these games. On the 21st game, each contestant will give the "Probable Score."

'Skins Erase 14-7 Deficit And Win in Second Half

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Pittsburgh, Oct. 3.—For the first time since 1945, when they wound up with the Eastern Division title, the Washington Redskins whipped the Pittsburgh Steelers at Forbes Field tonight.

By a 27-14 count, the Washington pros turned back their Smoky City rivals to win their first game in two 1949 starts. Perfect football weather and 28,844 paying customers turned up as the Steelers tried for their second straight victory.

Ancient Sammy Baugh, pitching three touchdown passes, was the Redskins' margin.

Great Third Quarter

The old codger, playing his thirteenth year of professional football, pitched the Redskins out of an 8-point hole with two perfect touchdown passes within four minutes of each other in the third quarter. He opened the scoring with a pay-off toss in the first period, and it was the 35-year-old Texan who handled the quarterbacking when the Redskins went out for a clincher in the waning minutes of the game.

Against the threat of Slingin' Sam the Steelers mustered no more than two second-period scores that spotted them a 14-6 lead at intermission.

The Washingtonians marched 70 yards for a touchdown the first time they got the ball. Pete Stout and Bob Goode were the runners in seven straight line plays that reached the Steeler 37. Then Baugh got off his first pass, a 10-yarder to Hugh Taylor, and three plays later it was the same combination that accomplished the last 25 yards. Taylor caught the ball as he dashed into the far right corner. Goode's try for the extra point hit the crossbar.

Steelers On the March

As the second period opened it appeared that failure might make a great deal of difference. The Steelers, with Don Samuel, Bobby Gage and Joe Geri running and passing the Redskins dizzy, thundered 54 yards to the Redskin two, from which point Fullback George Papach plowed through for the tying points. Joe Glamp added the conversion that left Washington behind, 7-6.

Five minutes later the deficit had grown to eight points with a series of seven Pittsburgh running plays good for 65 yards. This time the last 27 yards were entrusted to Jerry Nuzum, and he paced it off carefully on a reverse from Papach. Glamp again converted.

But that was all, brother, for the Steelers. After one false start, with Harry Gilmer in charge, the 'Skins got in the thick of things again with three plays, one of which counted very little.

Sandifer Scores

The first was Baugh's 29-yard heave to Howie Livingston, putting the ball on Pittsburgh's 37. Harry Dowda kept Steeler defenses massed with a smash at center and then Baugh whipped over the big one. His long lob caught Dan Sandifer a single stripe away from payoff territory and all Howard Hartley could do was wave as Sandifer whizzed past on the end of a 35-yard scoring play. Dick Poillon kicked the point and cut Washington's deficit to 14-13.

Washington was penalized to its own 42 for too much time before Sammy got to pass again. But when Taylor was well in the clear, Sammy had no trouble getting the ball to the lanky Oklahoman for his second scoring catch. The whole play covered 58 yards, Taylor running the last 23 with no opposition whatever. Again Poillon converted to put the 'Skins ahead, 20-14.

It was midway of the final quarter that Coach Billick Whelchel's lads sewed it up. Only one Baugh pass was involved in the 75-yard march, capped by Goode's one-yard plunge through the middle. Goode himself had picked up most of the yardage on a thrilling 47-yard slant through right tackle to the Steelers' 15.

Fight Again? Louis Gives Yes-No Reply

By accentuating the negative, Joe Louis last night helped to substantiate what is believed to be the positive—that he'll defend his heavyweight championship

"I won't say that I won't fight again and I won't say that I will," he tried to explain in his Griffith Stadium dressing room.

His exhibition against Cestac, one of 12 on tap, attracted only 3565 to the stadium. The net gate was $5830.94. That didn't bother Joe, however. He worked on a flat guarantee of $4500.

Louis, at 226, tried to inject a punch into his session with Cestac, but the latter simply wasn't able to help out. Louis peppered the 245-pound Argentine with lefts for four rounds, jolting him twice with the 16-ounce gloves in the final round.

Jack Dempsey, definitely retired former heavyweight champion, stepped into the ring for an introduction, and quietly stepped out.

Sonny Boy West, Washington lightweight, paired off against one Willie Cliff of Pittsburgh in the featured 10-rounder, made short work of the invader. After dropping him three times in the first round, Referee Charlie Reynolds very wisely halted it, awarding West a TKO after 2 minutes and 15 seconds.

Preliminary results:

Welterweight Leon Daughtry, Washington, won eight-round decision over Walter Roane, Richmond; Middleweight Julian Keene, Washington, stopped Harvey Jones, Baltimore, in 2:27 of the second, and Lightweight Jimmy Carter, Baltimore, was TKO'd in 58 seconds of the second round by Miles Jones, Washington.

Sawpits' Slashing Slugger Received at White House

By George Garner

Editor's Note—Red Fedder, principal figure in this story, also is the principal character in a comic (?) strip drawn by Lank Leonard, also mentioned herein. Leonard is in town with other well-known artists to assist in the sale of U. S. Savings Bonds.)

RED FEDDER, the big wheel in a small baseball circuit, is in town with nothing on his mind except meeting President Truman and the "Veep" (he'll take no buss save from Jeannie), getting two tickets for the World Series (he'll settle for television at Bassin's, maybe) and helping to put over the sale of United States Savings Bonds.

Red arrived yesterday, accompanied by his greatest admirer and staunchest supporter, Lank Leonard. Mickey Finn is expected to join them today at the Statler, where Red is developing the hotel lobby nonchalance he'll need if he's called up by the rooklyn Dodgers next spring.

Maybe you remember that Mr. Phillip Finn, the well-meaning gentleman with the derby and the gay nineties sideburns, took Red to Vero Beach last spring, but Dodger Manager Burt Shotton, a cagy student of baseball timber, decided Red needed more seasoning before joining Jackie Robinson in Flatbush.

So Red was farmed out to Sawpits in the Inter-Colonial League, which by its very name indicates a New England locale. He did all right, too, lending credence to unofficial reports he'll be brought up to the big-time for the 1950 season.

It wasn't Fedder's fault that Sawpits lost the title to their cross-the-river rival, Eastport, in the final game. He culminated a terrific season with a tremendous blow that seemed tabbed for a home run, but Eastport's center fielder (we forget his name; isn't fame fleeting?) made—well, he made just one hell of a catch. And the season was over.

Fedder, a right-hander, led the league in just about everything this season. He compiled a .360 batting average, topping the circuit in homers, triples, doubles and singles, too. His homer record, 49, of course, was not as good as Ozark Ike's 59 in another league, but we hear they were grooving 'em for Ike toward the end of the campaign.

Red even got beaned, which caused no little concern for a bit, but he's alright, now, according to Leonard, who seems to do most of the talking for the celebrated ball player.

Leonard also told The Washington Post reporter that following the visit here, and possibly the World Series in New York, Fedder will return to Sawpits to become sports director for the Phillip Finn Youth Foundation, proposed by the enterprising Mr. Finn and financed by Mr. Finn's millionaire friends who want to keep juvenile delinquency out of Sawpits, there being none there at the present time.

This newspaper also learned from a responsible source initialed L. L. that Red on a recent squirrel-hunting trip with the young lady's dad, asked, and received the hand of Jeannie with the light (or dark, or red?) hair.

That's good hunting, Red, we always say!

Score: 22-14

Van Buren Sets Record Eagles Win

Detroit, Oct. 3 (AP).—Halfback Steve Van Buren of the Philadelphia Eagles set a National Football League lifetime ground gaining record tonight as he smashed over for two fourth-period touchdowns to give the Eagles 22-14 win over the Detroit Lions.

Van Buren piled up 135 yards in 33 tries to give him a total of 3951 yards in his NFL career. The former Louisiana State University star, now in his sixth year as a pro, eclipsed the record of 3860 yards set by Clark Hinkle of the Green Bay Packers in his 10 years pro career.

Lions Hold 14-5 Lead

The Eagles had to call on all of Van Buren's running wiles to erase the 14-5 halftime lead which the stubborn Detroit Club built up in its first home game of the year before 25,012 fant.

Detroit got off to a fast start as it went on a 65-yard scoring drive in the opening period. Fred Enke tossed a 22-yard pass to end Johnny Greene and Bill Dudley kicked the point to put the Lions ahead 7-0.

The Eagles turned in their first score in the opening minute of the second period as Cliff Patton booted a 13-yard field goal.

A couple of minutes later the Eagles' Mario Gianelli broke through to block a Detroit quick kick for a Philadelphia safety cutting the Lions' lead to 7-5.

Fumble Leads to Score

Detroit got its second touchdown drive under way after recovering a fumble on the Eagles' 40. This time it was a 5-yard pass from Enke to Greene for the score with Dudley again kicking the point to give the Lions their 14-5 halftime lead.

From then on, it was all Philadelphia. The visitors had the ball on the Lions' 3-yard line as the third period ended.

Then Mr. Van Buren took charge of things. He smashed over for a touchdown and Patton converted to make it 14-12.

Detroit tried a passing attack, but Dick Humbert intercepted for the Eagles on the Lions' 30 and Van Buren was on his way again. It took the Eagles just four plays to score with Van Buren carrying on three, including the 6-yard touchdown smash. Patton converted and the Eagles led for the first time, 19-14.

Patton booted a 32-yard field goal in the final minutes to run the score to 22-14.

Cooper Has Close Call

Jimmy Cooper, recent conquerer of Bantamweight Champion Manuel Ortiz, looked like anything but a contender last night. In the feature 10-rounder of a Turner's Arena card, Cooper had to stage a last-minute rally to outpoint Charlie Titone of Brooklyn.

The 10-rounder which followed the main event, saw Holly Mims, 153, draw with fellow Washingtonian Ken Stribling, 162.

The card attracted 1070 spectators. Gross gate was $1,983.60, and the net $1,474.45.

In a third 10-rounder, Little Dynamite 126 of Washington, decisioned Pedro Firpo, 126½, Camden, N. J.

In a pair of five-rounders, Garland Edwards, 153, outpointed Johnny Pratt, 156, and Pat Thomas, 130, decisioned Cy Redmond, 132. All four are Washingtonians.

Poor Record In 2 Seasons Brings On His Ouster

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Joe Kuhel was released as manager of the Nats yesterday.

Other than saying "we just had to make a change after the way we finished in 1948 and this year," President Clark Griffith would give no reason for Kuhel's dismissal. He said Kuhel will not be retained in the Nats' organization.

The Nats finished seventh under Kuhel in 1948 and eighth this year.

Several Considered

No successor will be named for a few weeks, Griffith added. The 79-year-old chieftain said he planned to talk with several "prospects" at the World Series in New York this week. He gave no hint whom he considered a "prospect."

Kuhel, who played on the 1933 championship Washington club, succeeded Ossie Bleuge as manager in 1948, coming to the Nats from the Class C Hot Springs, Ark., team which he piloted for the Chicago White Sox in 1947.

"Joe's a personal friend of mine and a credit to the game," Griffith remarked. "But in view of our seventh place finish in 1947 and eighth this year, we had to make a change. He's a good baseball man and I'm going to do everything I can to get him another job in baseball."

That Griffith planned to make a change was quite obvious two months ago. At that time, the Nats had lost 11 in a row. Griff summoned reporters to his stadium office and outlined Nats' rebuilding plans.

Vote of Confidence Urged

When reporters requested that the best immediate tonic for the sagging baseball team was to give Kuhel a vote of confidence and rename him manager that day, Griffith replied:

"Now is not the time."

He added, however: "I'm not blaming Joe Kuhel for anything. It hasn't been his fault. He has done a fine job. He's gonna make us a real good manager."

If Kuhel's dismissal as manager was no surprise, then his outer from the Nats' organization most certainly is. Only recently, Griff, in answer to a reporter's question as to Kuhel's status for 1950, said:

"Joe Will Be With Us"

"Joe will be with us in some capacity, either as manager or in another job, next year."

If Griffith observes custom, he'll name one of his former players manager, custom from which he has not deviated in the eight appointments he has made since buying control of the Nats 29 years ago.

Griff, himself a former Nat manager, would give no hint as to a possible successor. He said he has an "open mind" on the problem.

The 43-year-old Kuhel was signed to a one-year contract before the 1948 season, succeeding Bluege, who was made farm-club supervisor. After the team had lost 18 in a row there was considerable doubt as to whether Joe would be retained this year, but the Nats won seven of their last nine games and Kuhel was rehired for another year, shortly after the close of the 1948 season.

City-Wide Welcome

Consigned to eighth place in most preseason predictions, Kuhel's 1949 Nats astonished the baseball world by sweeping to nine straight victories on their first Western trip. They came home to a city-wide welcome hailed as the "Wondrous Nats," but failure soon set in.

The club finished the season Sunday by beating the Athletics, 3-0, ending the worst season a Washington team has experienced

GW Heads Ask That Officials Be Censured

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Moving pictures indicate that George Washington was deprived of a vital fourth down in Saturday's V. M. I. game, and the Colonial high command wants the officials censured.

"There can be no protest of the game which we lost, 14 to 7," said G. W. Dean of Men's Activities Max Farrington, yesterday, "but we want the officials rapped across the knuckles for refusing to listen when our captain, Andy Davis, tried to point out their mistake."

According to the pictures, here is what happened:

V. M. I. scored a touchdown and took a 14-7 lead with 5½ minutes left. G. W.'s Al DuGoff returned the ensuing kickoff 47 yards to the G. W. 49. On first down, Davis passed to Charlie Jones on the V. M. I. 45. Before the next play was run off, V. M. I. was penalized 5 yards for delaying the game, and G. W. was awarded a first down on the V. M. I. 40.

On the first two downs, Davis tossed incomplete passes. On the next play, which should have been third down, Davis started to pass, was trapped and ran the ball for a 9-yard gain to the 31.

There was about four minutes to play and G. W. supposedly had another down to make up a yard needed for another first down. However, officials awarded the ball to V. M. I. on downs. Davis tried to protest to the officials, but was "brushed off," according to Davis.

Yanks Rated Favorites on Stout Hearts

New York, Oct. 3 (U.P.).—Those mountain-climbing New York Yeakees who got to the top without asking the odds, were installed today as stout favorites to go with their stout hearts against the Brooklyn Dodgers in the World Series which begins Wednesday in Yankee Stadium.

Except for what the Yankees managed to do despite more than 0 lost time accidents and ailments, plus being a bill club that on paper didn't figure to win, it looked like the odds were a little out of line.

But the bookies who were quoting them in some quarters at as high as 2 to 1, weren't looking at a paper line-up.

Joe DiMaggio, seemed to be in better shape than at any time since he was stricken with virus pneumonia two weeks before the season ended.

Although Stengel said he would not announce his lineup until tomorrow, it was figured pretty definite that he will start a left hander, Eddie Lopat, who won 15 games, a lot of them blue chip jobs, in the series opener.

At the same time Dodger boss Burt Shotton was expected to start his stopper hurler, Preacher Roe, who also won 15 games and who most of the season was the man who won the games Brooklyn just had to have.

Pity Coach Faurot

Missouri Scores 84 Points In 3 Games, Hasn't Won Yet

By Bus Ham
Post Sports Editor

ALONG THE LINE of scrimmage—

That Missouri-Southern Methodist score started us off: S. M. U. 28, Missouri 27.

So the big guy says:

"I'll bet you that Don Faurot is half out of his mind out there at Missouri. In his team's last three games, Missouri has scored 84 points, but hasn't won a ball game.

"Just look at those Missouri scores: Clemson 24, Missouri 23, in the 'Gator Bowl last New Year's Day; Ohio State 35, Missouri 34, in this season's opener, and then that 28-27 thing with S. M. U.

"Three straight losses by one point each.

"Guess Faurot is having the toughest luck in the country, but scores are running high everywhere. Never saw the like of such whoppers. College scores are beginning to read like results of pro grames.

"No kidding, there's a definite trend showing up in those high scores. It means that the college coaches are concentrating too much on the attack.

"And it makes them look pretty bad as defensive experts. That's really the hardest part of the game to coach, you know—the defense.

"All of this high scoring has come on rather suddenly. Only a few years ago, a coach could sit back and feel that he had the game won if his team held a 14-0 lead.

"And if his team took a chance on a forward pass while holding such an advantage, everybody thought he was a pretty dumb bloke.

"Not so nowadays. The boys go right on throwing from their own 20-yard line even when they are out ahead. And most coaches want a 30-point lead before they let up ever so little.

"Yes, sir, college football is all offense these days and that makes me a little melancholy. I sure liked those rockin'-sockin' defensive scraps of the old days."

'Supercritical Attitude' Results

Pre-Game Film Study of Irish Tactics Admitted by Official Under Leahy's Fire

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 3 (AP). One of the four officials sharply criticized by Coach Frank Leahy for their work in Saturday's Notre Dame-Washington football game today disclosed a previous Irish-Huskies game movie had been studied before game-time by the officials.

W. H. Frazer, of Spokane, Wash., head linesman at the game, said the four officials were shown the movie of last year's Irish-Washington game at South Bend "not too long" before Saturday's game, won by Notre Dame, 27-7.

Coach Leahy declared the "irregular" procedure "tended to send the officials into Saturday's game with a supercritical attitude."

Frazer explained that "I personally don't think it was a good idea and I have written a letter to Victor O. Schmidt, Pacific Coast Conference Commissioner."

In Los Angeles, Schmidt said: "I haven't received any letter from Frazer, and until I do I'm not in a position to continue or start a controversy in the matter."

Later Schmidt added:

"I was not at Seattle last Saturday, therefore I am unable intelligently to discuss all occurrences there. Besides, I believe that public controversy regarding officiating is detrimental to the best interests of football and I therefore refuse to extend such controversy by any discussion on my part.

"I can say that we appointed four of our best and most experienced officials whose honesty is above question."

Fraser said Washington coach, Howie O'Dell, was at the showing and "the purpose was to point out what they (Washington) thought about holding by Notre Dame players." The officials said the holding question involved the manner in which the Irish blocked, and not actually grasping of a player.

In Saturday's contest, Notre Dame was penalized 135 yards, 7 of 10 major infractions coming on illegal use of the hands on offense or defense. Washington was penalized 20 yards.

A Washington regent who asked his name not be used said Washington would never again schedule a football game with Notre Dame.

"We can get plenty of games with 'name' teams," he said, "without having to subject our players to the kind of football we saw Saturday."

Leahy's post-game comment was that the Irish had to "play four extra men."

In Seattle, University of Washington Athletic Director Harvey Cassill issued this statement:

"Officials who worked the Washington-Notre Dame game were shown movies of last year's game between the two schools. It is customary for officials to check with coaches to determine any particular phase or aspect of a game about to be played."

Leahy, emphasizing that his outburst against the officiating Saturday was to defend the Irish against an inference of "dirty playing," said the movie incident was "quite irregular. I don't know of this ever being done before."

Leahy said he had reviewed movies of Saturday's game and that Notre Dame "played the same as always, exactly according to the rule book."

Lucky Ned Wins Laurel Feature by Half-Length

Bill Bennings . . .

AT LAUREL.

DEAR FOLKS:

Business picked up as the second full week began. Whatever is the cause of a decline in betting, it is not the fault of favorites. On the first seven programs the public choice made good in 23 of 56 races for an average of .41. Two races daily, except Saturday, are being televised in Washington on WMAL, Channel 7, starting at 3:15 p. m.

Dave Woods, publicity director for Laurel, handles the commentary. Ray Haight and Buddy Brocator arrived from Wheeling in their new cars. Swap Out, twice a winner here, tries to make it three in a row Saturday in the famous Maryland Handicap. See you on the rail.

Arthur Pilate Second in Anacostia

By Walter Haight

Laurel, Md., Oct. 3.—Mrs. W. W. Vaughan's Lucky Ned, a 3-year-old who wasn't lucky enough to figure in this year's Triple Crown competition, nevertheless continued to earn his way today.

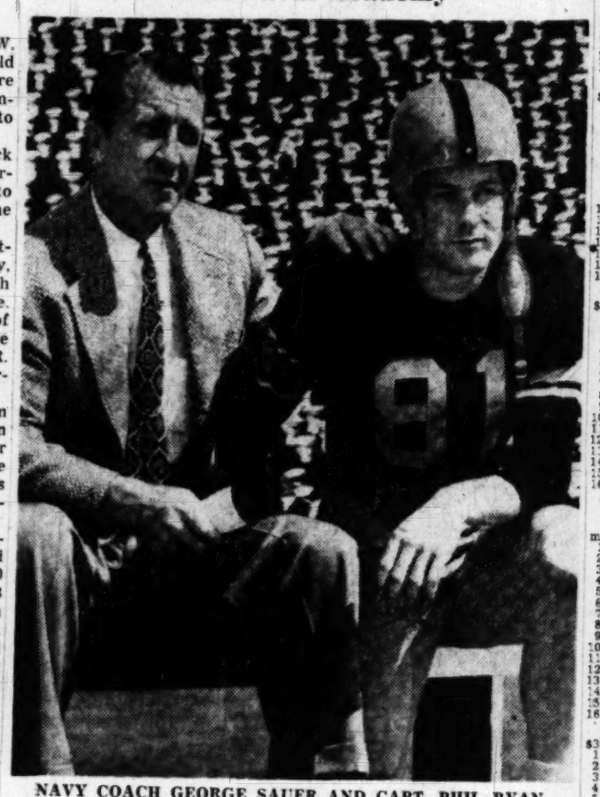
The son of Neddie and In Luck showed speed and courage in surviving a blanket photo finish to win the Anacostia, a sprint in the featured position on the card.

Lucky Ned, Jockey Jack Robertson's second winner of the day, won by upwards of a half length from A. J. Wilson's Arthur Pilate. The later was a neck in front of R. A. Johnson's Black and Blue which, in turn, nosed out R. R. McClarin's New Oxford, the favorite, for the show end.

Backers of the successful brown gelding received a $16.40 win mutuel. Lucky Ned, winner of four of 13 starts this year, made it nine times in the money circle and was clocked in 1:13 2-5 for the 6 furlongs over a fast track.

The Washington-owned Flamingo Farm's darling man provided the second race punch in a $155.60 daily double pay off on the 7 and 3 tickets. Jockey George Cardoza rode the $14 shot into the wire. Mrs. R. H. Heighe's Creel started the big twin bet return by taking the first race under the handling of Jockey Jack Robertson, the 3-year-old paying $15.40 in his own right.

Coach of the Week
George Sauer
U. S. Naval Academy



NAVY COACH GEORGE SAUER AND CAPT. PHIL RYAN

George Sauer, of the United States Naval Academy, is The Washington Post's area Coach of the Week.

His selection is prompted by Navy's victory over Princeton last Saturday, the first Academy victory since midseason in 1947.

Last year, when Sauer came to the Academy as the Navy's first civilian football coach in 16 years, he must have felt something like a hunter tracking bear with a BB gun.

He inherited a mediocre squad and a superman schedule. There was Notre Dame, Michigan, Pennsylvania, Missouri, Duke, Columbia, California and Army to be met, and no guns to meet 'em with.

Sauer and his sailors showed up for every ball game and lost every one except the Army game. They tied the Cadets, 21-21, in a game which will be ranked as one of the most stunning upsets of all time.

That was the only bright spot of a dismal season.

Something happened to the Navy squad that day last year in Philadelphia. They felt Army was plenty lucky to get off with a 21-21 tie. The players who would be back the following season came out of the game with a tenacious determination that next year would be different.

Their rekindled spirit was fanned even brighter by the addition of 25 members of last year's unbeaten Plebe squad to their ranks.

They started the 1949 season with a 42-20 pasting at the hands of the mighty Trojans of Southern Cal. But none of that "tough luck, you deserved a better break, boys" for them. They actually felt they should have beaten the team, rated at least three touchdowns stronger.

On the plane ride back from Los Angeles, Sauer preached the "victory" sermon:

"We'll beat Princeton, don't worrq."

Last Saturday in Baltimore, Navy stepped out and shellacked the Tigers, 28-7. Least surprised of all was Sauer himself.

"Until that Army game last year there was a cloud of defeatism over us. We're on the road now. I don't say we'll lick Norte Dame or the likes of them, but we'll be plenty tough for anybody.

G.W. and G.U. Each Lose Grid Player

George Washington and Georgetown yesterday each announced the loss of a football player for the season.

Don Druckenmiller, Colonials' center, who suffered a severe brain concussion in the 1947 Miami game, and was attempting a comeback this season, has quit football for good.

Dick Imborononi, regular Hoya left guard, is out for the rest of the season because he suffered a torn internal ligament at the base of his right leg. He will be operated on today at Georgetown Hospital.

Mich. State 7th

Kentucky Rated 1st by Williamson

KENTUCKY ATTAINS No. 1 ranking nationally by the Williamson system this week for the first time in the 18 years that the system has been in operation.

Kentucky reached that peak by beating Ole Miss, a good team in any league, 47-0.

In the first ten is Michigan State, ranked seventh. Michigan State's opponent next Saturday will be Maryland University, ranked thirtieth.

Last week's over-all predictions turned out a higher percentage of correct predictions than the previous week. With 314 games reported, there were 253 wins and three upsetting ties for a percentage of 81.1. The previous week, the percentage was 77.6.

Along with everybody else, the system suffered several astounding upsets. Nevertheless, it turned out to be right—while other predictors, professional and amateur, were wrong—on the following games (as to winners and score differences):

Southern Methodist 28, Missouri 27; Duke 21, Tennesse 7; Columbia 14, Harvard 7; Wyoming 8, Colorado A&M 0; Oklahoma A&M 48, Denver 2; Houston 26, Wichita 6; Kansas State 27, Colorado University 13 (moral); Iowa State 19, Kansas 6; Clemson 7, North Carolina State 6 (moral); North Carolina 21, Georgia 14; Pennsylvania 21, Dartmouth 0; Tulane 18, Georgia Tech 0; Vanderbilt 14, Alabama 7; Florida 40, Tulsa 7; Oklahoma 33, Texas A&M 13.

in 40 years. The team lost 104 games, winning 50. Only the 1909 team was worse. It won only 42 games.

Kuhel, an amateur magician, envisioned his dismissal in mid-August on the day that the then eighth-place Browns took a double-header from the Nats.

On the train that evening enroute to Chicago, he told this reporter:

"I'll probably be canned at the end of this season and I'm not griping. That's baseball. But in my defense, I'd like to say this: You can't make chicken salad out of chicken feathers."

Haefner, at the time, was the Nats' best pitcher. Kuhel was was all for plastering the little knuckleballer with a heavy fine, but not firing his best hurler. As a re-

Kuhel had one distinction as a major league manager—he was the only pilot whose protest ever led to the suspension of an umpire. His report to American League President Will Harridge of what Kuhel called "Bill McGowan's riding our ballplayers" resulted in a 10-day suspension of the veteran arbiter in 1948.

In 1944, he returned to the Nats on waivers, remaining until 1946 when he was sold to Chicago on waivers.

Text of Minton's Propriety Letter

Here is the text of a letter by Federal Judge Sherman Minton to the Senate Judiciary Committee which yesterday approved his nomination to be a justice of the Supreme Court:

I HAVE received your request to appear before the committee. I, of course, desire to cooperate fully, with the committee at all times but I feel that personal participation by the nominee in the committee proceedings relating to his nomination presents a serious question of propriety, particularly when I might be required to express my views on highly controversial and litigious issues affecting the court.

I am informed that the principal question with which the committee is concerned is my position with regard to the bill presented in 1937 to increase the membership of the Supreme Court.

You will recall that at the time the bill in question was under discussion I was assistant majority whip and, understandly, I strongly supported those legislative measures recommended by hte Administration.

My record as a Senator is a public record and open to scrutiny by the committee. It, of course, has no relationship to my record as a judge of the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals. However, my judicial record is also available for examination. In my opinion, that record speaks for itself, as does by record as a Senator. The latter record was open to your committee and to the Senate in 1941 when I was unanimously confirmed by the Senate to the second highest court in the land.

As assistant majority whip of the Senate I was a strong partisan and supported the Administration. I do not deny this. The record was made and I stand upon it. I may have made mistakes. I likewise may have made mistakes as a judge, but I think no man can point to one of my more than 200 opinions in the past eight years and truthfully say it was characterized by partisanship of any kind. When I was a young man playing baseball and football I strongly supported my team. I was then a partisan. But later when I refereed games I had no team. I had no side. The same is true when I left the political arena and assumed the bench. Cases must be decided under applicable law and upon the record as to where the right lies. I have never approached a case except to try to find the answer in the law to the question presented on the record before me.

AS MEMBERS of the Senate you will agree, I am sure, that the proper exercise of the duties of the senatorial office requires freedom of speech with which to express those convictions honestly arrived at and sincerely believed in. Under our representative system of government, the members of both legislative bodies, the Senate and the House, are the channels through which local public opinion is brought to bear upon proposed legislation. To inhibit members for any reason from the full expression of their views on any given measure would be to seriously hamper the effectiveness of our legislative structure.

As a Senator and an elected representative of the people, I considered it my duty and privilege to aid in the enactment of those proposals which I honestly believed to be of value to the country as a whole. That my belief in regard to some of these proposals was not shared by the majority of my colleagues, and that the measures failed of enactment, does not alter this fact. Nearly everything a Senator does is of a controversial nature. He must take a firm position on legislation, without regard to the possible unpopularity of his stand.

It might be pertinent at this point to invite the committee's attention to the fact that at least three nominees to the court, who were confirmed in due course, had strongly advocated the court plan. The committee did not see fit to query any of these gentlemen on this matter.

IN CONCLUSION I should like to refer to a statement submitted by Justice Frankfurter when he was asked to appear before the Senate Judiciary Committee in 1939, and read to the committee last Tuesday by you:

"I am very glad to accede to this committee's desire to have me appear before it. I, of course, do not wish to testify in support of my own nomination . . . While I believe that a nominee's record should be thoroughly scrutinized by this committee, I hope you will not think it presumptuous on my part to suggest that neither such examination nor the best interests of the Supreme Court will be helped by the personal participation of the nominee himself.

"I should think it improper for a nominee no less than for a member of the court to express his personal views on controversial political issues affecting the court. My attitude and outlook on relevant matters have been fully expressed over a period of years and are easily accessible. I should think it not only bad taste but inconsistent with the duties of the office for which I have been nominated for me to attempt to supplement my past record by present declarations."

While it is my desire to comply with any reasonable request of the committee, I am constrained at this time to call to its attention the serious questions of propriety and policy which I have endeavored to outline in this letter.

Committee Approves Minton

nomination yesterday. The Senate may vote on confirmation today.

Justice William O. Douglas, injured seriously in a horseback accident Sunday in Washington State, may not be able to take his place on the bench for weeks or even months.

Kilgore told reporters after the committee's closed session that Douglas' injuries were one reason for speedy action on Minton. Ferguson said he "couldn't even get" a closed hearing, let alone an open one. He said he wanted to question Minton about his views on the 1937 court plan.

Kilgore pointed out that only two court nominees in "recent history" have been personally called before a Senate committee. They were Justices Felix Frankfurter and Robert H. Jackson. Kilgore pointed out their neither had been on the bench, unlike Minton.

Minton was reported to be in the city yesterday but apparently stayed away from the Capitol in the knowledge of Administration plans to vote a reversal of the call for his appearance.

The opening court session yesterday lasted only 20 minutes, with most of that time devoted to eulogies by Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson of the two members who died during the summer recess—Justices Frank Murphy and Wiley B. Rutledge. Rutledge's chair was still draped in black since the court's formal 30-day mourning period is not yet over.

Justice Tom C. Clark, who replaced Murphy, wore his customary bow tie, but picked out one in black and gray.

Solicitor General Philip B. Perlman formally introduced Attorney General J. Howard McGrath, a one-time Solicitor General himself. Twenty-seven attorneys were admitted to practice.

This week will be devoted to determining which of the 300-odd cases before the court will be considered. About 50 cases accepted last spring already are on the docket with arguments scheduled to begin next Monday.

Included are numerous civil rights, antitrust, labor, tax and other cases. No opinions are likely for at least a month.

tip from a woman. Connors was employed there as a helper.

The woman had called police about a man who began acting suspiciously after getting out of car in the 4500 block of Burlington pl. When the police arrived the car and occupant were gone but, through the license number, the vehicle was traced to Connors.

Confronted by detectives, Connors, according to police, led them to a garage where his car was parked. A search of the auto revealed two sets of skeleton keys, binoculars, a pinch bar, a screwdriver and a crochet hook.

Police said the housebreakings were well planned and quoted Connors as laying down the following rules for the operations:

1. Never enter a house where there might be servants.
2. Knock on the prospect's door and wait. If no one answers, commence operations with a skeleton key at the rear door.
3. If dubious whether someone is home or not, call on the telephone. If no one answers return to the home and knock. If all is still quiet, proceed as above.
4. If a door is locked and a key is in the hole from inside, force it out with crocheting hook, then apply skeleton key.

All the housebreakings were conducted between 10 a. m. and 2 p. m., police said.

The housebreaker worked with neatness and dispatch, carefully replacing anything that had been disturbed in the search so that many victims were unaware as to what had occurred.

At Connors' former address, police said, they found rolls of small change and odd coins reported stolen.

The housebreakings occurred in the Eighth, Sixth, Tenth, Eleventh and Twelfth Precincts, it was reported.

Early Action Urged By Pope on Refugees

Castel Gandolfo, Italy, Oct. 3 (AP).—Pope Pius XII has warned the Western world it faces grave dangers unless the agonizing refugee problem is swiftly solved.

"Political, economic and even social dangers are involved in a policy of further delay and exaggerated caution," he told a refugee fact-finding committee of American Congressmen here yesterday.

The Pope appealed for "prompt and responsible community action" to end the "blight of peace-time detention camps . . . and the plight of millions who now must answer to the hideous appellation of 'expellees'".

Asks Vigorous Action

He urged the American Congressmen and their collaborators of every nation to "deal vigorously with the last remaining obstacles to full human freedom for our beloved refugees."

The Pope said the Roman Catholic Church is "doggedly determined to see this giant specter of human dereliction forever banished from the conscience of mankind." He expressed confidence in "ultimate victory soon."

The Pope's brief address was delivered in English yesterday at a special audience at his summer residence. The text was not made public until today.

Group Ending Survey

Attending the audience were Representatives Francis Walter (D., Pa.), chairman of the House Judiciary Subcommittee of Immigration; Frank Fellows (R., Me.); Chauncey W. Reed (R., Ill.); Michael A. Feighan (D., Ohio); William T. Byrne (D., N. Y.), and Kenneth B. Keating (R., N. Y.).

The group is ending a month-long survey of refugee and displaced persons problems in Germany, Austria and Italy. The legislators will sail next Wednesday from Naples for the United States.

Catholics in World Number 423 Million

Vatican City, Oct. 3 (U.P.).—The Vatican radio said today that the world's Catholics now number 423 million, an increase of 119 million in the last 20 years.

The radio said the increase could be attributed mainly to the growth of Catholic missionary activity.

Pope Allows Absolution Rites Aboard Planes

Vatican City, Oct. 3 (AP).—Pope Pius XII—frequently referred to as the modern Pope—has decreed that the sacrament of penance may be administered in airplanes and at airports.

Vatican sources said the new ruling, which makes the same provisions for voyagers by air as for those by ship, recognizes increasing air traffic and also looks forward to Holy Year, when hundreds of thousands are expected to take the airways to Rome.

By its provisions all priests can absolve penitents during an air voyage, after a crash, or at airports, on condition they are authorized by their bishops, or others having jurisdiction.

D. C. Bar Association To Hear Tweed Paper

The District Bar Association will hold its regular monthly meeting at 8 p. m. Tuesday, October 11, at the Mayflower Hotel, it was announced yesterday.

Harrison Tweed, president of the American Law Institute, will speak on "Drafting of Wills and Trust Agreements," an address first given at the recent American Bar Association meeting in St. Louis. A proposed change in by-laws also will be voted on.

Douglas Reported Recovering

Yakima, Wash., Oct. 3 (AP).—United States Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas, frequently mentioned as a possible Democratic candidate for the presidency in 1952, was recovering satisfactorily today from extensive chest injuries received when a frightened horse fell and rolled on him.

The 50-year-old jurist suffered 13 rib fractures and a punctured lung yesterday morning while on a horseback trip in the Cascade Mountains, near the scene of his boyhood.

Doctors attending him today said that while he was in considerable pain he was "coming out of it nicely." They said he would probably be hospitalized several weeks.

The accident occurred while Douglas was riding with a boyhood friend, Elon J. Gilbert of Yakima, in the rugged Chinook area.

The justice had stopped to tighten his saddle cinch on a narrow, rocky trail. As he was remounting, his horse reared and threw him.

Doctors said the general excellence of his physical condition from an active outdoor life is standing him in good stead.

They said there is no immediate danger of pneumonia

Buenos Aires, Oct. 3 (AP).—The Argentine navy said tonight the shipwrecked Argentine minesweeper Fournier had been located by planes searching the Straits of Magellan. It was not announced whether any of the 68 aboard the Fournier were saved.

Bishops Call For East-West Amity Efforts

San Francisco, Oct. 3 (AP).—The House of Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church today called upon the United States Government to "make ceaseless efforts" to bring about reconciliation with the Soviet Union.

The group adopted and sent to the House of Deputies a resolution to that effect. It acknowledged vast difiiulties in the path of such accord, but warned that war would be "a catastrophe of limitless proportions to the whole world."

The bishops also heard a plea for internationalization of Jerusalm by the Rev. Walter C. Klein of St. George's Cathedral in Jerualem.

Both houses urged setting up a world government with power to keep the peace.

The world government resolution colled for strengthening the United Nations. It went even further in seeking "an international order limiting national sovereignty and world law binding on both nations and individuals for the . . . maintenance of just and enduring peace."

Army to Put Some Negroes In White Units

An Army spokesman yesterday amended an earlier statement by a military official to make it plain that Negro soldiers who qualify as specialists under the new Army racial policies may be assigned to white units under certain circumtances.

When the new policy was made public last week, a spokesman said that Negroes who qualify for military specialities after schooling will be assigned only to Negro units or post "overhead."

Yesterday, it was said that they can also be assigned to white organizations. However, it was made plain that this would normally occur only in the case of "rare specialties" such as top radar noncoms.

The Bradley P-TA will hold its first fall meeting tonight at 8 o.clock at the Bradley school, Madison st. and Hartsdale ave. Bethesda. Plans will be discussed for a parents workday, tentatively set for October 8.

Tidelands Oil Hearings Open Today

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) proposed yesterday that at least a portion of the Government's share of royalties from oil-rich Federal-owned tidelands be earmarked for payments on the national debt.

Hearings on four separate tidelands bills will open today before O'Mahoney's Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee. Interior Secretary James A. Krug and Solicitor General Philip B. Perlman will testify for the Administration in for development of the off-shore resources, with the Interior Department administering the properties.

Chairman O'Mahoney told a press conference he would like to write a debt retirement feature into the bill.

"Under the General Leasing Act, the Government has collected royalties on leases from the public domain in excess of 100 million dollars," O'Mahoney said.

"It has seemed to me that it would be sound fiscal policy to devote a portion of the royalty which will be collected from the continental shelf and the submerged lands to this purpose.

"This is particularly appropriate since the Supreme Court pointed out in its opinion: 'The ocean, even its 3-mile belt, is . . . of vital consequence to the Nation in its desire to engage in commerce and to live in peace with the world.'"

Two bills pending before the committee have Administration backing. One provides for Interior Department administration and the other for complete surrender by the Federal Government to any claim to inland waters. Two others, supported by coastal State interests, would quit claim all Federal title to the off-shore oil lands.

County Reports Polio Case of Boy; Total Now 26

A 10-year-old youngster from the 700 block of East Leland st. Chevy Chase, has been stricken with polio, the Montgomery County Health Department reported yesterday.

The young county boy became ill Friday while en route to Laconia, N. H., and was admitted to the hospital there. His case brings the total reported in Montgomery County to 26.

A total of 175 cases of polio, six fatal, have been reported over Greater Washington so far this year.

CHAMPEER takes Washington by storm!

CHANGE brings you CHAMPEER. . . . Change followed change, and brewing history was rapidly being made "down Old Georgetown way." . . . Change in top management, change in brewing equipment, change in brewing procedures.

Changes started when Christian Heurich, Jr., appointed Albert J. Bates as General Manager. Mr. Bates, formerly President of Ruppert Brewery in New York, and previously President of a successful Wisconsin brewery, promptly put his wealth of experience to work. He set up rigid new quality standards, rediscovered the grand old formula for Champeer, which was originally created by and brewed exclusively for the late Christian Heurich, Sr. Mr. Heurich called this product his champagne beer. He did not produce it commercially because he thought it too costly for commercial sale.

Mr. Bates brought change. . . . Out came old, out-moded vats; in went up-to-date steel ageing tanks. Increased facilities and modern procedures resulting from these changes brought the cost of Champeer within the reach of everyone. Truly, all-out change brings you Champeer, the champagne-like sparkling malt liquor which is capturing a nationwide market. For your own pleasure—ask for Champeer—America's new taste thrill.

Conferees Seeking Early Agreement On Pay Measures

With the adjournment of Congress believed near, Senate-House conferees hope to reach agreements by this weekend on the pay-reclassification bills. Their first meeting has been set tentatively for Wednesday.

Individual conferees yesterday were busy working on compromise plans and counter-proposals. Each of the three conferences will get a dozen plans. Top Administration Civil Service advisers are reported to have been among those asked to submit proposals.

The dozen conferees who will rewrite the three pay-reclassification bills will be very important people to the Federal employes involved. There is 170 million dollars at stake in conference—or about $122 average for each of the 1,385,000 employes who would benefit by the bills.

The House classified bill, for example, would increase the average salary of the 885,000 classified employes by $113; the Senate's bill by $170. In contrast, the House postal bill would give the average postal employe $360 in benefits in comparision with $120 in the Senate bill.

There was evidence yesterday that the conferees would agree on a report for classified employes that would be a bit more liberal than the $113 House bill, and that the postal report would be better than the original Senate bill. Uniforms for postal employes required to wear them and new longevity promotions—both provided in the House bill—are certain to get attention at the postal conference.

For classified employes, several influential conferees are said to be supporting a ceiling of $13,500, restoration of grades 6, 8 and 10, and a few dollars more for lower bracket employes. The House voted a $15,000 ceiling; the Senate $12,500.

For top executives, the same ploe is proposing a $17,500 grade for undersecretaries, and that the Senate's $14,000 minimum be boosted to $15,000 for executives. Otherwise, most other provisions in the Senate bill can be expected to be adopted by the conference.

CONFEREES: On the classified bill the conferees will be: Senators Johnston (D., S. C.), Long (D., La.), Graham (D., N. C.), Langer (R., N. Dak.) and Thye (R., Minn.) and Representatives Murray (D., Tenn.), Morrison (D., Vt.), Miller (D., Calif.), Rees (R., Kans.) and Sadlak (R., Conn.).

On the postal bill, Humphrey (D., Minn.) will replace Graham; Hagen R., Minn.), Davis (D., Ga.) and Williams (D., Miss.) will replace Sadlak, Morrison and Miller, respectively.

On the executive bill, Flanders (R., Vt.) will replace Thye. On the House side it will be Murray, Morrison, Miller, Rees and St. George (R., N. Y.).

The compensation bill also was sent to conference. In the Senate, Douglas (D., Ill.), Neely (D., W. Va.), Withers (D., Ky.), Taft (R., Ohio) and Donnell (R., Mo.) were appointed. Probable House conferees are: Lesinski (D., Mich.), Kelley (D., Pa.), Powell (D., N. Y.), McConnell (R., Pa.) and Smith (R., Kans.). The bill would pay adequate benefits to employes who are injured in line of duty.

JOBS: Civil Service today will begin to accept applications for information specialists, $4479 to $6235 to start; aviation safety agent, $4479 to $7432; airways flight inspector, $5232 to $7432; public health educator, $4479 to $7432.

BLOCKED: The bill to give postal employes credit toward automatic promotions for time served in the military forces has been blocked in the House Rules Committee. Chairman Sabath (D., Ill.) told the House: "I regret it is impossible to secure action on several other bills affecting postal employes, one of which is HR-87 (the veterans credit bill)."

RETIREMENT: The bill to provide larger pensions to many employes who will retire was signed into law and made effective as of Saturday, October 1.

Any Federal worker who retires may provide a survivorship pension for wife or husband by taking a 5 percent reduction on the first $1500 of annuity, and 10 percent on everything over that figure. Working wives are able to assign benefits to their husbands for the first time in history.

On Capitol Hill, it's reported that all other major retirement bills have been pigeonholed for the remainder of this session.

Mark of Vandals at GWU

The Washington Post

Revenge Seen As Motive of GWU Vandals

Police were working on the theory of "revenge, and revenge only" yesterday to solve the mystery of weekend vandalism at the Delta Zeta Sorority, 2129 G st. n.w.

Precinct Detective Elwood Lomax said last night slim clues gathered so far indicate the destruction of furniture and theft of six silver candlesticks appears to have been the work of a girl.

"We're working on a theory of revenge, and revenge only," he said.

The sorority's quarters, on the fourth floor of Sorority Hall at George Washington University, were entered between 7 p. m. Saturday and 2:30 p. m. Sunday.

A Woman's Footprint

Sulfuric acid had been poured freely on rugs and upholstered furniture. Lavender paint was spread over much of the three-room apartment, and a sharp instrument had been used to cut mirrors and chairs.

A woman's footprint in paint on the fire escape and fingerprints from loving cups in the quarters were being studied.

Police also were investigating a report that a typewriter was missing yesterday morning from offices of The Cherry Tree, GWU annual, next door to the sorority.

Card on Bulletin Board

This was considered significant because a white card was found tacked to the sorority bulletin board when Miss LaDonna McGriff, a member of Delta Zeta, discovered the destruction Sunday afternoon. On the card was typewritten.

"One for the money, two for the show, three to make ready, four to go."

Police said the key to the apartment would fit other quarters at 2129 G st. No evidence of forced entry was found, police said.

Repair work on the Delta Zeta quarters began yesterday, when painters refinished the walls and chapter members pitched in to clean up. Damage was estimated at $1000.

Last night, all fraternities and sororities on the campus voted to hold a benefit dance at the Phi Sigma Kappa house, 1734 New Hampshire ave. nw., at 6:30 p. m. Sunday. Proceeds will go to the Delta Zeta sorority.

Joy Explains School Tax Statement

Chairmen of the Arlington County Board and the Arlington School Board took opposing views yesterday of the county's 1949-50 school budget.

In a letter to Basil De Lashmutt, county board chairman, Barnard Joy, who heads the school board, said he had been misquoted as saying he was "well satisfied" with the school budget set by the county board. He charged the misquotes to De Lashmutt.

Joy said the board's position could be summarized as "neither satisfied nor dissatisfied with the school budget, but as dissatisfied with the $1.65 level of taxes for the schools because it would mean several classrooms will now have to be constructed from funds raised by the school bond issue rather than from current funds.

In his reply to Joy, De Lashmutt said: "It is quite evident that Joy's letter is a political document written for the purpose of attacking me as a candidate for the county board . . . I did not misquote his expression of satisfaction with the 1949-50 budget which he made before the Civic Federation. I cannot, of course, be responsible for any change of mind he may have undergone in the meantime."

2 Drivers Hurt, One Critically, When Cars Crash

Two motorist were injured, one critically, at 7:30 p. m. yesterday when their cars collided at Naylor rd., and Suitland pkwy, near Silver Hill, Md.

They are Winfield Preston, 66, an insurance salesman of 3339 Brothers pl. se., who is in Casualty Hospital in a critical condition with a fractured skull; and James Sutton, 32, a frozen foods salesman of 3225 23d st. se., who is in the same hospital in an undetermined condition from head injuries.

Preston's car was traveling north on Naylor rd., when it collided with Sutton's going west on Suitland pkwy., police said.

Post Carrier Hunt Turns Up Woman

The quest by The Washington Post for the four oldest carrier boys—based on the date they first started delivering this paper to subscribers—brought forth a "girl" competitor for the honor.

She is Mrs. I. E. Staley of Route 2, Falls Church, who established the first Washington Post route in that area in 1912.

She wrote to John J. Corson, the Post's circulation director, that she served the communities of Chesterbrook, Franklin Park and Kirbytown, in Fairfax County, first by walking or on horseback. Later, she adopted a horse-drawn rig, and finally, when roads were good enough, an automobile.

Furthermore, she kept the route in her family, until 1945, her seven children taking over, one after another, as they were old enough.

W. L. Colwell, of 3930 Connecticut ave., wrote Corson that he delivered The Post from 1907 to 1909 around 12th st. and Florida ave., Trinidad st. ne., and Morris and Oakie sts. ne.

And E. S. Bonsall, of 7200 Bowdoin ave., College Park, Md., telephoned that he was a carrier 54 years ago.

The Washington Post wants to find the four carriers by Saturday, which is National Newspaper Boys Day. They are asked to write or telephone John J. Corson, the circulation director.

On October 23, they will be guests, with several hundred of the present carrier salesman, on a train trip to Philadelphia, where they will be Post guests at the Redskins-Eagle football game, and return.

Negroes Sue Members of School Body

Damages Asked On Charge 2500 Were Kept Out Of Kindergarten

Members of the District Board of Education and Superintendent of Schools Hobart M. Corning were sued in District Court yesterday for failure to provide kindergarten training for 2500 Negro children.

The suit, filed in behalf of Eddie Andrew Gregg, 4-year-old son of Mrs. Edna Gregg, 5412 B st. se., charged that school officials had failed to give Negro children educational opportunity equal to that of whites because of "race prejudice" and "alleged fear of the reactions of the adult white population of the District."

The suit said that "buildings, equipment, facilities and teaching staff" for Negro kindergarten pupils are "grossly inferior to that offered white children."

The nine members of the board and Dr. Corning were sued for $10,000 each for compensatory damages, and the suit also asked $100,000 in punitive damages.

Attorneys Charles H. Houston, George E. C. Hayes, both former members of the Board of Education, and Harry B. Merica filed the suit.

In addition to damages, the suit asked for an injunction to forbid "substantially inferior" status of education "solely because of race or color."

The suit said that on September 8, Eddie, who will be 5 next month, applied for admission to kindergarten at the Richardson Elementary School, 55th and Blaine sts. ne., but was turned down "solely on the ground that enrollment was so large that no space was available" to accommodate him.

2500 Barred, Suit Says

Twenty-five hundred Negro children have been denied admission to kindergarten because of "lack of adequate space and teaching personnel," it was said.

The suit was brought as a "class suit" in which Eddie and his mother as plaintiffs sued "on behalf of themselves and all other rejected Negro applicants for admission to kindergarten."

The suit said that District authorities are giving inferior education to Negro children "solely because of race and color" in violation of the Federal Civil Rights Act and the due process clause of the fifth amendment to the Constitution.

Senator Seeks New Trial in Jordan Case

Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) yesterday made a new attempt to win freedom for Thomas Jordon, convicted slayer in the sensational Garden T Shoppe murder case of 1931.

The Senator filed a resolution that would give District Court here the right to entertain a motion for a new trial of the 48-year-old former short order cook. Jordon is serving a life sentence at Lorton, Va. jail for the slaying of Mrs. Lizzie T. Jaynes, cashier, in a restaurant at 1835 Columbia rd. nw.

Morse told the Senate that Johdon, rounding out his thirteenth year, is in a "partially paralyzed and speechless" condition.

The Senator said the victim's former attorney, John M. Holzworth, had convinced him that new evidence casts "serious doubt" on Jordon's guilt. Several alleged instances of mistaken identity were raised during and since the original trial, Holzworth recalled yesterday.

Morse explained that an act of Congress was now necessary to reconsider the case since the statute of limitations sets two years after conviction as the limit for taking up a motion for retrial on basis of new evidence.

Jordon's case has been an off-again-on-again proposition since his conviction. President Roosevelt commuted him to life imprisonment on June 11, 1937, when friends suggested Jordon's companion might have fired the shot that killed Mrs. Jaynes.

The Presidential decree followed an unprecedented "crime subcommittee" inquire by the House District Committee into the case. In February of 1938 the United States Court of Appeals denied another attempt of Jordon to escape the life sentence.

Morse strongly urged that a Senate Judiciary Subcommttee be convened to act on his resolution before Congress adjourns.

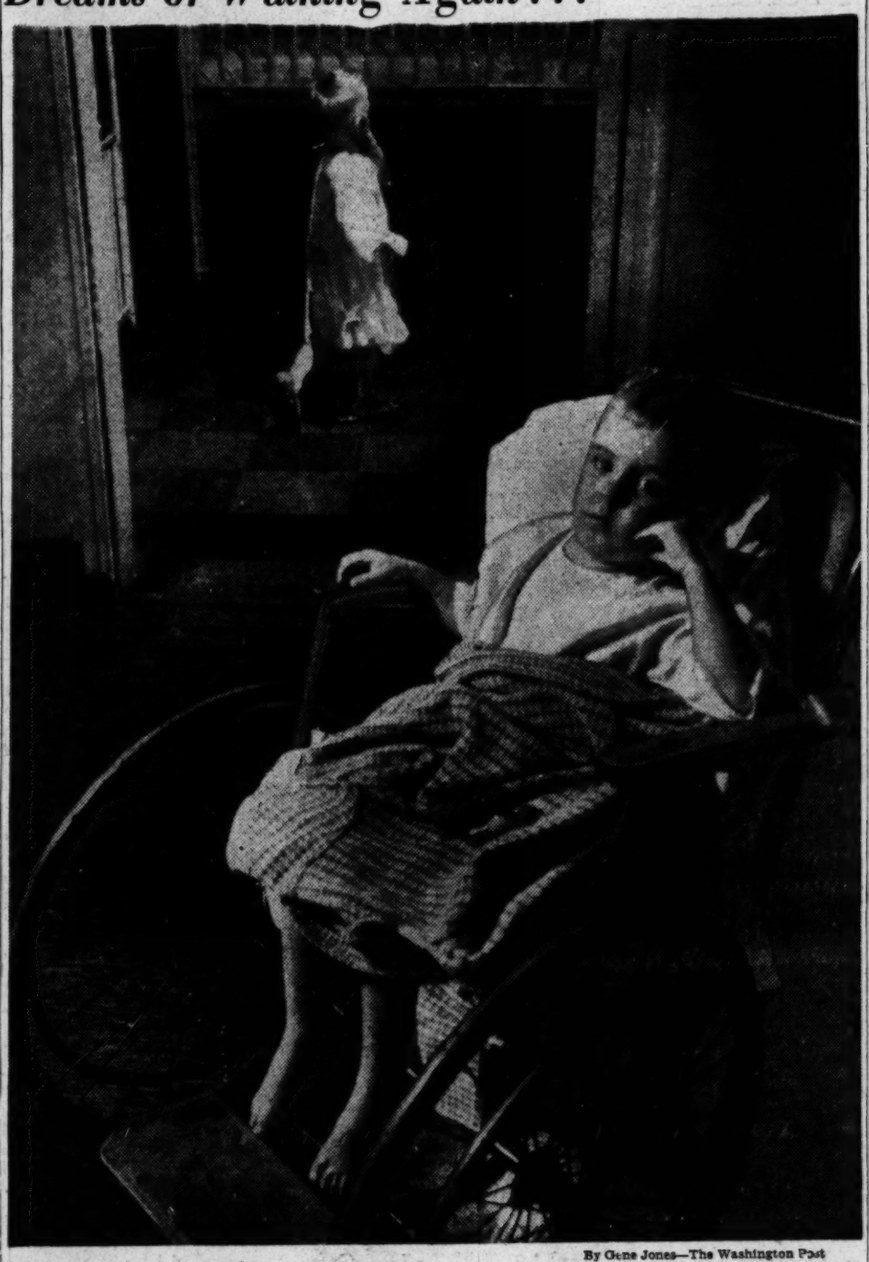
Arlington School Film Scheduled

A March of Time film, "The Fight for Better Schools," starring Arlington County's recent campaign for more and better schools, will be shown in area theaters beginning Thursday.

A special invitation only preview of the 18-minute film will be held at 10:30 a. m. today in the Federal Security Building, 4th and Independence ave. sw.

Opening with the dissatisfaction of a small group of Arlington parents, the picture traces the successful fight for an elected school board and a 6½-million-dollar bond issue.

Dreams of Walking Again . . .



By Gene Jones—The Washington Post

PARALYSIS VICTIM—Four-year-old Joe Chandler looks wistfully from his wheelchair at Children's Hospital as another patient walks by to visit a playmate. Joe could walk and romp until stricken by paralysis from the waist down 2 months ago

Boy Paralyzed In Tumble; A 'Strange Case'

A blond, 4-year-old Temple Hills (Md.) boy was turning somersaults off a sofa almost two months ago to amuse his one-year-old brother.

In the middle of one of his turns, he twisted up a little, landed hard, and cried, "My back hurts!" His mother put him to bed with hot packs, thinking he had strained a muscle.

But the next morning the little boy was paralyzed from the waist down. He was rushed to Children's Hospital.

Ever since that day, August 6, doctors have been making exhaustive tests to find out just what happened to Joe Chandler, whose home is at 5785 2d st., Temple Hills. They are still mystified.

X-rays showed no broken bones in his back, there were no signs of polio or tumors, physicians said yesterday. While they have reached no definite diagnosis, they feel it is likely that some kind of injury from the somersault may have caused a hemorrhage into the spinal chord.

If that is the cause of the paralysis, one doctor said, Joe and his parents can look for improvement, but it will take time.

Meanwhile, the plucky little boy, whose smiling cheerfulness has made him a favorite in his ward, is given daily exercises so he will keep as fit as possible.

The doctors have told Joe's parents, Joseph G. Chandler, Civil Service Commission clerk, and Mrs. Chandler, that Joe's pitiful plight is one of the strangest cases they have seen.

Besides his baby brother, Stephen, Joe has another brother, Patrick, 2 years old. And Joe is also anxious to get back home to see "Cracker," a 3-month-old cocker spaniel won by his father in a television show contest a week ago.

Boy Scout Wins Alexandria Troop Lutheran Award

The National Lutheran Council's "God and Country" Church Scout award has been conferred on Stanley D. Garthoff, 16, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Garthoff, 211 Uhler ter., Alexandria.

Garthoff

Young Garthoff received the award through a special project he carried on at Good Shepherd Lutheran Church, Alexandria, Scout Troop 129, and Sea Scout Ship 145. He was a Life Scout of Troop 129.

He was graduated in June from George Washington High School and now attends Virginia Polytechnic Institute. He has been active in DeMolay organization work, was on the high school rifle team, served as president of his church Young People's League and is a musician.

$150,000 Counterfeit Case Results in 5 Indictments

Five persons were indicted here yesterday for making, passing and possessing $150,000 in counterfeit $20 notes during the first six months of this year.

The District grand jury also handed down 64 other indictments yesterday, including one charging James W. Sacchino, 43 Massachusetts ave. nw., a used car dealer, with 27 counts of forgery and uttering, and embezzlement.

Those indicted on the counterfeit charges were Arthur M. Bebar, 35, a photographer in the office of the Adjutant General, 1013 17th st. ne.; Eugene H. Creighton, 26, alias George Cordova, George Martin and James Martin, cab driver, 1315 Delafield pl. nw.; Walter Wilbur Kidwell, 31, alias E. A. Rogers and George D. Richardson, also of the Delafield pl. address; William F. Hughes, 26, and his wife, Josephine, 26, 6000 13th st. nw.

Arrested in June

Bebar, Creighton and Kidwell were charged with "falsely making, forging and counterfeiting." Kidwell and Creighton were also charged with possession of counterfeit notes; Kidwell was charged with passing a counterfeit note, and Creighton was charged with "transferring and delivering" counterfeit notes.

The Hugheses were charged only with possession.

The five were rounded up by Secret Service men June 27, when less than $2000 worth of the money had been circulated, it was revealed.

Sacchino, whose automobile dealer's license was revoked in May, was charged with embezzling 15 cars, valued at more than $15,000, from January to September.

The District Attorney's office said that Sacchino took cars on an agreement to sell and then refused to give Sellers either their money or their cars back. In some cases, he gave Sellers part of their money and told them he was having financial difficulty, according to the indictment.

Belgian Diplomat a Victim

A $1450 automombile belonging to Thomas Basyn, executive director of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, and financial counselor to the Belgian Embassy, was one of the cars Sacchino embezzled, the indictment said.

Other indictments returned yesterday included one against Sylvain Hirsch, who was charged with shooting his landlady, Miss Thelma F. Owen, in the neck on August 19 in an argument over $30 rent. He was charged with assault with a dangerous weapon and assault with intent to kill.

Martin M. Ballard, 28, and Robert L. Johnson, 29, both of 1233 E st. se., were indicted on charges of stealing from the mails and forging Government checks. The two were charged with forging more than $300 worth of checks during June and July, 1949.

Clarence A. Jackson, 39, 737 Howard rd se., and David McDowell, jr, 24, 1618 8th st. nw., were indicted and charged with possessing counterfeit $10 bills made by a 15-year-old boy. The counterfeiter, police said, was a high school student who was arrested August 16. Treasury agents said he made crude notes while employed to photostat documents at the National Canners Association, 1739 H st. nw.

The grand jury failed to indict three persons, Mary E. Stevens, 23, 1911 13th st. nw., charged with unauthorized use of a vehicle; William R. Smith, 27, of Atlanta, Ga., charged with larceny after trust, and Donald F. Beuchart, 17, 6110 D st., Capitol Heights, Md., charged with robbery.

Postlude

Bessie Mayle Sings With Authority

By Paul Hume

Bessie Mayle, soprano, sang a refreshing recital last night in Phillips Gallery.

Opening the Monday evening concerts in that hall of excellent programs, Miss Mayle presented unusual and attractive songs. Her accompanist was Thomas Kerr, who gave outsanding support in varying styles all through the concert.

It was also good to have Bernard Lee Mason on hand to provide violin obligatos during Mozart's L'Amero and Chausson's touching Chanson Perpetuelle. These two items stood out both because of the fine violin playing and because Miss Mayle thoroughly encompasses the divergent styles required for them.

Sung With Warmth

Her Mozart was easily vocalized and sung with warmth. Its remarkable cadenza was equally well handled. One need not pick out songs or arias in which Miss Mayle excelled since she is the kind of artist who moves with the same authority whatever she sings.

Thus we are left free to applaud her choice of Faure, Lully and the Russians in making so sound a program. Indeed the weakest song on the list was the American item, a Valentine, by Abram Chasins. This song was repeated as the sole encore.

Miss Mayle's voice is a lyric of fine quality, handled sensitively and with skill. It is capable of the higher tones generally associated with coloraturas but the singer is wise enough to omit them. There is a great body of beautiful songs available to voices of the Mayle type. It is reassuring to note that this young artist is acquainted with so many of them.

Rare Singing Voice

If she will continue in her studies until she can produce a steady tone for the long classic lines and achieve the same body and resonance in higher tones she has in her low and middle notes, Miss Mayle will be a rare singer.

The one realm of songs she neglected and which she would find extremely rewarding is that of the modern American. We think particularly of items by Paul Nordorff, David Diamond and Samuel Barber among others which would suit her.

It was a fine opener for the vocal season. May others do as well.

Lonely Heart Case Brings Indictment Of Pair Here

Couple Met by Mail, Defrauded Others That Way Prosecutor Tells Grand Jury

A middle-aged Washington couple, who met by mail through a lonely hearts club, were indicted yesterday for using the same means to defraud other lonely hearts.

The District grand jury charged that Hellen and Fred R. Stancil, sr., both in their middle 50s and present whereabouts unknown, executed "a scheme and artifice to defraud" by posing as a rich widow and rich widower.

Men in Texas, Louisiana and Iowa, and women in Georgia, Florida and Alabama, all members of the correspondence club patronized by the Stancils, put their love in black and white, once they had learned about the "annuities," "real estate," "endowments" and "trust funds" advertised by the Stancils.

Woman the More Successful

Operating as "Hattie Koenig," Mrs. Stancil was the more successful of the two, according to Assistant United States Attorney Richard M. Roberts.

Mrs. Stancil's success could be measured in terms of more than $1000 in property and two engagement rings, sent to her by absent hearts, growing fonder every day, Roberts said.

In fact, it was Mrs. Stancil's success that proved her undoing.

The pressure became so great last summer, Roberts said, when two suitors were demanding that a date be set for matrimony, Mrs. Stancil was forced to send at least two of her suitors the following telegram:

"Hattie died in Canada five days ago. Thought it my duty to inform you. (Signed) Alice."

He Got Canned Food

"Alice" was Hattie, or Hellen, Roberts said, but the telegrams were soon in the hands of Post-office Department officials.

Stancil's success was measured more in terms of home-canned foods carefully prepared by lonely hearts. The response to his letters was tremendous, Roberts said, when he told his correspondents that their food "was even better than mother used to make."

The couple admitted to post-office investigators that representations they had property were false, Roberts said, but left the District before they could be arrested. Stancil gave his occupation as a construction worker, and his address as 1377 Massachusetts ave. se. Mrs. Stancil gave her address as 1328 Shepherd st. nw.

Asked Them to Leave

Mrs. Eleanor Olversen, at that address, said she rented an apartment to the Stancils for six months, ending in August, 1948. She said, "I had to ask them to leave, when I saw some of the letters they got, out there in the trash heap."

When asked to describe the letters, she said. "Well parts of them were missing, but they were some love letters all right, from some men in Atlanta."

She described Mrs. Stancil as "right nice looking, when she was fixed up, although I guess she did touch her hair up a bit."

And he was a fine looking man, Mrs. Olversen said.

Bucky Harris' Tax Liens Erased

Notice was filed yesterday in District Court that tax liens totalling $6727.69 against Stanley R. (Bucky) Harris and his wife have been discharged.

The liens were for Federal income taxes during 1946, 1947, and 1948. Harris, former big-league baseball player and manager, has resided here at 3013 44th pl. nw., according to the court notice.

Also marked discharged was a $1855.76 tax lien against James E. Schwab, sr., and Mary E. Schwab, 3715 Ingomar st. nw.

Mother Appeals

Child Facing Death Needs Blood Donors

Michael Linkins, 34 months old, probably isn't going to make the grade, his doctor says. But the child's mother, Mrs. Cecelia Linkins, 23, can't make herself believe it.

"I don't think he's going to die," she said yesterday, on the eve of the little boy's return to Children's Hospital.

The boy is victim of a rare kidney disease — nephrosis — which he's had more than two years. Last week he began fainting. He's going back to the hospital today for a complete checkup and more blood transfusions.

Mrs. Linkins, whose husband, Joseph, 27, is a carpenter, made an appeal yesterday for blood donors. She has done it before. When the boy was in the hospital last March, she asked for blood donors. Fifteen persons responded.

Now the time has come again. The seven fainting spells the boy had last week have led his doctor to tell Mrs. Linkins: "I don't know how long it will be now." Physicians before this have informed her there is no cure for Michael's illness, she said.

Nearly 400 persons who believe that the best way to fight disability is with ability, met at lunch yesterday.

It was the "kick-off" of National Employ the Physically Handicapped Week in Washington. They came into the ballroom at the Mayflower Hotel, some in wheel chairs, some with the jerky stride of the spastic.

It was as happily calm a bunch as you'd want to see.

Sprinkled in with the physically handicapped who attended were representatives of the other sponsoring organizations, the Business and Professional Women's Club of the District of Columbia and Lions clubs of the District of Columbia.

They heard Harold Russell, star of "The Best Years of Our Lives" and commander of AMVETS, point out the need for educating employes in the best ways to use so-called handicapped persons.

They heard Gen. Omar Bradley, head of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, express the hope that every employer in the United States will come to realize the importance of employing physically handicapped "who are in many cases better qualified than some of us who are more fortunate."

And they heard Senator Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.), chairman of the Senate District Committee, cite a long list of the illustrious whose accomplishments had been made despite their handicaps.

Among those he named were Franklin D. Roosevelt, a victim of infantile paralysis; Demosthenes, the Greek orator, who talked with pebbles in his mouth to strengthen his diction; John Milton, who composed great poetry, even though blind, and Helen Keller, who rose above the triple affliction of blindness, deafness and muteness, to become a leading American figure.

The week will be highlighted by exhibits featuring work by the handicapped, prepared by a number of both public and private agencies. Radio interviews and films also will be a part of the week-long observance.

One-Page Paper On Tavern Walls Is 55 Saturday

The Bulletin, one page newspaper of latest headlines and sports events usually found adorning the walls of pool halls, taverns and restaurants, will celebrate its fifty-fifth year of continuous publication on Saturday

Established in 1894 by John J. Walsh and Henry Tait Rodier, the paper boasts of editing 20 pages of news copy into its 10 columns plus sports—results the same day they happen. Two editions are printed each day.

The paper pays its way by carrying advertisements along with the news on its one page. The editors warn, however, that the "masculine character of the paper's editorial comment precludes purely feminine advertising."

Man Gets 45 Days In Car Weaving

John W. Poindexter, 21, was sentenced yesterday to serve 45 days in jail after police charged that he bounced and weaved his way in a stolen car, October 2, through the street islands in the 900 block of New York ave. nw.

Judge Scott imposed sentence for unreasonable speed, driving on the wrong side of the street and failing to obey an officer's signal. Poindexter, whose address was given as 1006 Park rd. nw., was held for the grand jury on the car theft charge.

Adult Education Classes Offered In Montgomery

A schedule of adult education classes was announced yesterday by the Montgomery County Board of Education.

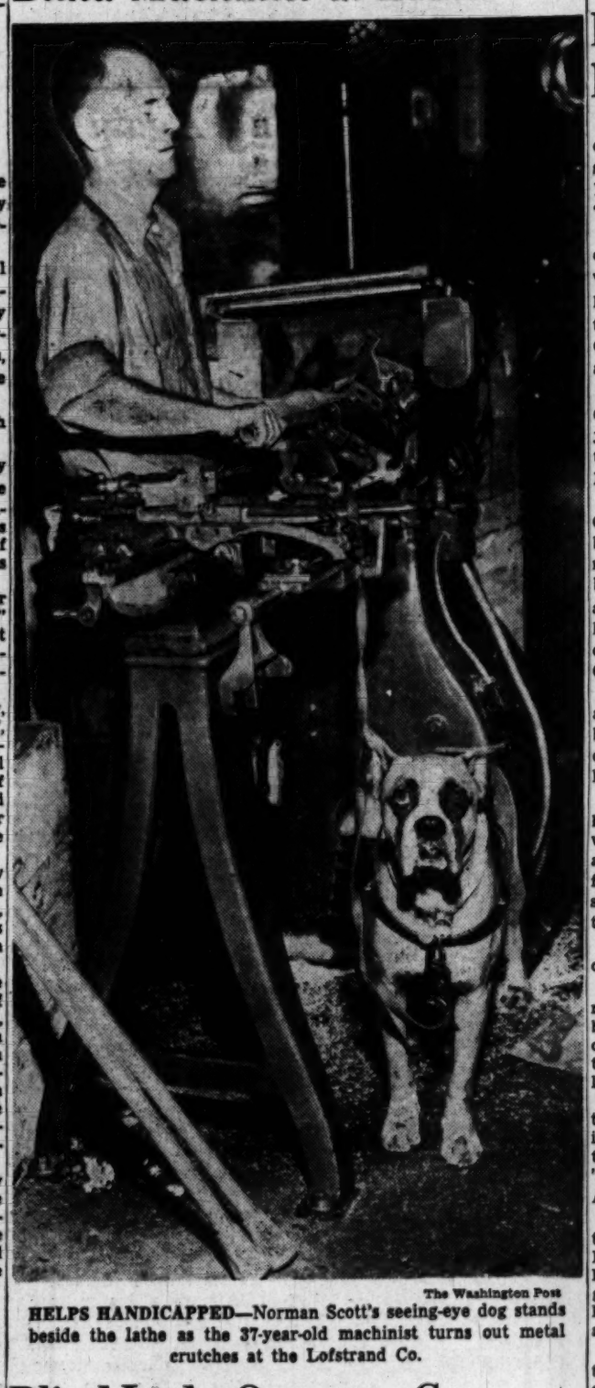
Blind Machinist at Lathe



The Washington Post

HELPS HANDICAPPED—Norman Scott's seeing-eye dog stands beside the lathe as the 37-year-old machinist turns out metal crutches at the Lofstrand Co.

Blind Lathe Operator Gets Kick Out of Helping Others

By James B. Graham
Post Reporter

Norman Scott gets a big kick out of his work as a metal lathe operator. "It's most satisfying," he says, "to know that I'm helping other physically handicapped people."

Blinded nearly six years ago, Scott daily mans a lathe at the Lofstrand Co.'s Rockville factory, turning out parts for a light metal cane-type crutch. He turns out a prodigious amount of work, according to his superiors.

"I still do all the things I used to do," he said yesterday with self-confidence rare even in many nonhandicapped persons. "And sometimes it seems I get more fun out of them," he added.

He made one plea for other physically handicapped persons, asserting many employers remain reluctant to take a chance on a workman with some impediment and "won't even give him a chance to produce."

"Plant owners should deal with physically-handicapped persons just as they do with salesmen," he declared. "Make them show what they have to offer."

Scott's own boss, A. R. Lofstrand, jr., Montgomery County delegate to the Maryland General Assembly, said he wishes he had more men like Scott.

"There are few jobs that Scotty can't do here," he declared, "and those that he can, he does fully as well, if not better than men with perfect eyesight."

"He has a perfect safety record for the more than four years he has been here," Plant Supt. G. C. Woodward pointed out.

Popular with his fellow workers, Scott said the happiest moment of his life occurred at Christmas time, 1947, when plant workers banded together to buy him a seeing-eye dog. The dog stood calmly by his machine yesterday as Scott unfolded his experiences.

Scott, who lives with the family of a coworker just north of Rockville, told the story of his blinding without emotion.

It occurred when a revolver he kept in a chest beneath his bed fired as he attempted to remove it.

He was a truck driver and cabbie then, but after spending 1365 hours at the war production training center he was able to embark on his new trade. After six months at another company, he went to Lofstrand and has been there since.

"I used to dance a lot, jitterbug stuff," he said, "and I can still do that. I can still enjoy my beer, too. My dog sits beside me and takes me home afterward."

One incident which occurred a few months ago at the plant still amuses Scott. He was working late one night when all the lights went out. Lofstrand called to him to wait a minute and he would get the lights fixed.

"I just called back to him that I don't need any lights to do my work," Scott grinned.

Minnesota Center

Opposition to the antitrust suit recently filed against the Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co. chain by the Federal Government was voted last night by the Minnesota Center Citizens Association meting in City Bank.

A letter, which will be sent to the Attorney General, credited the company with enabling housewives to save in food shopping and fostering "h e a l t h y" competition among stores.

The association also went on record as favoring music on buses.

The following officers were elected: Lieut. Col. C. D. Sterner, president; L. D. Campbell, vice president; Louis Beinert, second vice president; Otis Spitzer, treasurer; Mrs. Helen Golembeski, recording secretary; Mrs. Harriet Sterner, financial secretary.

In Memoriam

A booklet of 101 "In Memoriam" tributes suitable for publication is now available without charge. Remembrances for all members of the family and for friends are included. The booklet may be obtained at the front counter in the Post building, by telephoning your request, or by writing to the Washington Post Classified Advertising Department, Washington 4, D. C.

Bottle Club Battle Cry Is Sounded

The Dupont Circle Citizens Association yesterday came out of its summer layoff to launch an unlooked-for investigation into "bottle clubs."

The probe was born at the tag end of a routine first fall session, when most of the 30-odd members present were listening for a motion to adjourn. Said Mrs. William Garret Ridgely from the floor of a sudden:

"I'd like to ask what a bottle club is." Then she added, "It's just a drunken place where they take a bottle in and make noise, I'm told."

Mrs. Ridgely, who lives at 1908 Q st. nw., said her curiosity had been piqued by one such establishment that operates near her. "I've been away, myself," she reported, and said neighbors had informed her that revelers there made a lot of noise.

Gill Gives Definition

W. Herbert Gill, treasurer of the association and one of the neighbors at 1519 20th st. nw., rose to define bottle clubs for Mrs. Ridgely and the attentive audience.

"A bottle club, in brief, is a place where you go with a bottle when you can't buy it elsewhere and drink until they close," he informed the group. He added that such places have a definite closing time.

"I think that's just a drunken orgy," interpolated Mrs. Ridgely.

Said Gill: "It's a job for a committee to investigate." The members, however, turned the subject over to William Clark Taylor, attorney and the group's law and legislation committee chairman.

Taylor was instructed to advise the association, at its next meeting, of the legal rights and potentialities ("and how we can stop 'em," injected Gill) of bottle clubs.

Appointment Indorsed

In other business, the association backed appointment of Dr. Daniel Seckinger to the post of District health officer and opposed granting of an alcoholic beverage license to the Toronto Restaurant at 20th and P sts. nw.

It also endorsed the stand of the Federation of Citizens' Associations that, if necessary, students at Wilson Teachers College be transferred to Roosevelt High School and that the Wilson building handle some of Cardozo High School's overflow; and went on record favoring a three million dollar appropriation for the sesquicentennial celebration next year.

Stanton Park

Continued use of radios on Capital Transit Co. streetcars and buses was favored in a resolution passed by the Stanton Park Citizens Association at Peabody School, 5th and C sts. ne.

The association voted to oppose rezoning of 7th and 8th sts. ne. from commercial status back to residental and to contribute $5 to a Halloween celebration at Sherwood playground.

C. P. Johnson was reelected president. William Rowe, of The Washington Post advertising department, was reelected vice president. Others elected were Miss Kathryn Bowers, vice president; Mrs. Daisy Goldstein, treasurer; Miss Bowers and Harry N. Stull, Washington Post columnist, delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations, the latter for his twenty-fifth consecutive year.

Mount Vernon

The Mount Vernon (Va.) Citizens Association last night elected the following officers for the coming year:

Harrie White, jr., president; Percy E. Smith, vice president; Mrs. R. Carl Stevens, corresponding secretary; Mrs. V. C. Woerheide, recording secretary, and Lieut. Col. Donald J. Wilkins, treasurer.

About 70 persons attended the quarterly meeting at St. Luke's Church on Fort Hunt rd., Fairfax County.

Georgetown Citizens

Georgetown's public schools were reported to be sinking under the weight of old age last night at a meeting of the Progressive Citizens Association of Georgetown.

At the annual meeting, which saw Col. Harold B. Hinton reelected president for his second term, more than 100 members indorsed these recommendations by Mrs. Charles Hubbard, a member of the group's education committee:

1. That schools be thoroughly remodeled.

2. That "one young teacher" head a physical recreation program at each school.

3. That classes be limited to 25 pupils, with non-District children not permitted to enroll.

4. That an improved cultural program be set up.

The association also passed a resolution asking the District Commissioners to hold up on proposed widening of Wisconsin ave. and Q st. nw. for at least a year. Members deplored destruction of six "historic" and majestic" elm trees at the intersection contemplated under the projected widening.

Instead, the group proposed that results of traffic patterns caused by the opening of the Whitehurst Freeway and Dupont Circle be carefully studied, with the hope that the two projects will obviate the street changes.

Also elected last night were Mrs. Stephen Dorsey, Mrs. Jean W. Frear and Raymond Wilmotte, first, second and third vice presidents; Mrs. Elizabeth Draper and Miss Annie C. Kelliher, corresponding and recording secretary, and Miss Edna Ladson, treasurer.

Chosen delegates to the Federations of Citizens Associations were Mrs. Elizabeth Sullivan and Alexander Hawes.

Harry G. Sims Funeral Set Wednesday

Funeral services for Harry G. Sims, 79, retired principal musician of the United States Marine Band, will take place at 2 p. m. Wednesday. They will be at the Lee chapel, 4th st. and Massachusetts ave. ne.

Mr. Sims, a lifelong Washington resident, died Saturday at the Bethesda Naval Medical Center.

He served 30 years in the Marine Corps. He also organized and trained the Henderson Drum Corps, which was sponsored for several years by the late Mrs. Mary Foote Henderson. She was the widow of Senator John B. Henderson of Missouri and owner of the recently torn-down Henderson Castle opposite Meridian Hill park on 16th st.

Mr. Sims retired from the Marine Corps in 1926. Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Dorothy Godfrey, 812 Buchanan st. ne., with whom he made his home, and Mrs. Lillian Yech of College Park, Md., and a sister, Mrs. Olive Joyce, 3825 Calvert st. nw. Burial will be at Arlington Cemetery.

Civic Leaders Hear Experts On 3 Diseases

Some 40 leaders of civic organizations last night heard "appeals to save lives" from experts on three major killing diseases of our time—heart disease, cancer and tuberculosis.

The civic leaders were told that unless organizations like theirs take part in spreading knowledge of these diseases, the millions of dollars spent on research and services will not go very far.

They were told also by the medical speakers that elimination of misinformation about these diseases in the community is equally important.

Available treatment and services to combate the three killers were outlined at the meeting, which was sponsored by the Heart Association of the District of Columbia, the District Cancer Society and the D. C. Tuberculosis Association at the YWCA.

Dr. Peter D. Comanduras, associate clinical professor of medicine at George Washington University, stressed that 80 percent of all body cancers are readily detectable on examination, and that the cure rate of cancer "could be doubled tomorrow if everyone knew the facts."

Dr. Bernard J. Walsh, cardiologist of the Bureau of Maternal and Child Welfare, pointed out that new equipment at Children's Hospital makes it unnnecessary to send children to other cities for "blue baby" and other heart surgery now. Between 50 and 75 such patients can be operated on each year in the area, he said.

Dr. Robert J. Anderson, chief of TB control United States Public Health Service, said the community must not stop with the chest X-ray survey carried on last year. Isolation and treatment, relief of economic effects of the disease, and education must follow, he said.

Chairman of the meeting was Dr. Charles E. Bish, a director of the Tuberculosis Association.

Goldsborough Orders Boy To Home

Judge T. Alan Goldsborough yesterday ordered a 3-year-old boy turned over to the Board of Public Welfare until District Court decides which of two women should have custody over him.

The mother, Mrs. Mary Miller, 26, of Landover, Md., claims the boy, Jonathon, as her son and says that Mrs. Floyd Little, 35, of 1317 10th st. nw., has kept the child from her since shortly after his birth.

Mrs. Miller said that the child was registered falsely in Mrs. Little's name. Mrs. Little, in turn, says that Mrs. Miller signed a formal statement giving up the child as unwanted.

Last week, Judge Goldsborough heard part of the habeas corpus suit over Jonathon, continued the case for investigation until October 24, and allowed Mrs. Little to keep the boy in the interim.

Yesterday, however, he called the parties in and directed Mrs. Little to turn over the child, either to the Public Welfare or to Mrs. Miller.

Keeps Informants Secret

When Mrs. Little's attorney asked for the reason behind the change of mind, Judge Goldsborough said he had information indicating Mrs. Little was not "a proper person" to have the boy during this period.

The judge refused to give the source of his information, saying that divulgence might hamper his investigation of the case.

James E. Taussig

St. Louis, Oct. 3 (AP).—James E. Taussig, 84, retired president of the Wabash Railroad, died today after a brief illness.

Taussig served as head of the Wabash system from 1920 to 1931. He entered the railroad business as an apprentice in the mechanical department of the Terminal Railroad here in 1884.

He is survived by a son, Edward Taussig, of Lake Charles, La., and two grandchildren. The funeral will be held Tuesday.

Mrs. William J. Stanton Dies, Georgetown U. Doctor's Wife

Mrs. Marie Sharpe Stanton, 52, wife of Dr. William J. Stanton, a member of the Georgetown University Hospital staff and a practicing physician, died yesterday at her home, 4100 Nebraska ave. nw., after a short illness.

Mrs. Stanton was born at Midlands, Md., and moved with her family as a child to Illinois. She came to Washington in 1915 to enter nurses' training at Georgetown University Hospital. She met Dr. Stanton at the hospital, and was married in 1917.

She is survived by her husband; a daughter, Mrs. John B. Brady, Silver Spring, Md.; two sons, Capt. William Stanton, jr., USA, Albuquerque, N. Mex., and Capt. James Sharpe Stanton, USA, Medical Corps, stationed at Bolling Air Force Base, and six grandchildren.

She also leaves three sisters, Mrs. Kathleen Habing, Teutopolis, Ill.; Mrs. Rose Habing, Gilroy, Calif., and Miss Bernice Sharpe, Shreveport, La., and a brother, Dr. Francis P. Sharpe, 4702 Yuma st. nw.

Funeral services will be held at her home at 9:30 a. m. Wednesday. A high requiem mass will be said at 10 a. m. at Saint Ann's Church, Wisconsin ave. and Yuma st. nw. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Truman Coined 'Fair Deal' Phrase, Clifford Tells Democrats

By Genevieve Reynolds and Nicha Soure

PRESIDENT TRUMAN himself coined the title "Fair Deal." It happened while he was putting the final touches on the draft of his 1949 State of the Union Message. So said Clark Clifford, Special Counsel to the President, in a luncheon address at the Woman's National Democratic Club yesterday.

It was the Special Counsel's first public speech in his four-year duty at the White House. Not only was it his first talk but yesterday was also his and Mrs. Clark's eighteenth wedding anniversary.

"We always lunch together on our anniversary," he explained. "But this is the first time we have not been alone."

Placing the origin of the "Fair Deal" phrase, Clifford said President Truman wrote in his own handwriting, "Every citizen of this country is entitled to a fair deal from his Government."

"The term is new but the basic policies are not," the Special Counsel said. Defending the Fair Deal program, the speaker termed as "eye wash" opponents' criticism that the program leads to Stateism and a welfare State and hence to loss of freedom. "People don't lose their freedom but gain new strength and welfare under such a program," he contended.

He enumerated the five goals of the Fair Deal program as (1) attainment of basic human rights; (2) conservation of human resources; (3) conservation of natural resources; (4) expansion of the economy; (5) attainment of world peace.

The speaker emphasized that strides must be made in the extension and preservation of rights to all people whether they be in minority or majority groups. "Democracies must demonstrate to the world that none are second class citizens," he said.

Aim of the President's Point 4 program to build up undeveloped areas of the world is to help people understand the benefits of a free enterprise system, according to the President's Special Counsel.

Two of the most important phases achieved in the Fair Deal program thus far, as seen by Clifford, are the minimum wage increase and the housing program. He termed the Foreign Policy legislation a great success, citing ECA, International Wheat Agreement, the Atlantic Treaty, the Reciprocal Trade Treaty. He expressed optimism that the International Trade Organization would be built up. As for Federal Aid to Education, he said that he hoped difficulties would be ironed out and legislation passed at this session of Congress.

Clifford warned that the Fair Deal Program is encountering a bitter fight from its opponents. "Every man in history who attempted to better the life of the people is vilified. No man was more vilified than the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt," he said.

Mrs. Oscar Chapman, program chairman, presented the speaker. Mrs. Julian Friant, president, presided and introduced Mrs. Truman's sister-in-law, Mrs. Frank Wallace of Independence, Mo.

GOP Hears Devaluation Talk

THE CHINESE ROOM of the Mayflower Hotel was filled to overflowing yesterday as Republican women gathered to hear a talk on the devaluation of the English pound.

It was the first meeting of the season for the League of Republican Women of the District of Columbia, and the president, Mrs. Carroll Kearns, expressed her happiness of seeing so many familiar faces as well as new ones in the audience.

The meeting began in a patriotic vein with the singing of "God Bless America" led by Mrs. E. S. Kochersperger, who was becomingly dressed in a brown taffeta suit with pink accessories.

The guest speaker, Sir Sydney Caine, explained the devaluation of the pound and traced its beginnings to the period before the first World War in simple terms.

Great Britain found herself in the same position as a family who not only had lost its capital but its earning power as well, Sir Sydney said. In the pre-World War I period, Britain's overseas holdings amounted to 10 per cent of the national income compared to 1 or 2 percent following the Second World War.

The temporary falling off of American demand for foreign goods this summer caused Britain to realize her export expectations were optimistic. "Britain couldn't rely on slow methods," Sir Sydney continued. "We needed some more sensational stimulant." Therefore the pound was devalued.

At the old exchange rate of $4.00 to a pound, a British motorcar would sell in the United States for $1500 but with the new rate of $2.80 to a pound, a car would sell for $1050, putting it in the class, Sir Sydney added with a smile, of a "bargain sale.'

Britain must sell more goods in order to pay for what she buys, he said, in the absence of external British income. But he added, quoting Sir Stafford Cripps, Britain must be careful not to put up her costs and wages again and lose the benefit of the devaluation.

"Our efforts would be stifled," he concluded, "if America and Canada do not take complimentary action,' adding that the two countries should make it easier for Britain to sell her goods in America.

Elsa Schiaparelli Here To Tap the Golden Lode— The U. S. Main Street Market

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

LAST SUMMER a topnotch Parisian milliner summed the financial situation for most of her confreres "it's almost impossible to get along without an outlet in America." However, Elsa Schiaparelli, now visiting in Washington, through perfumes and other liqueficatious luxuries has had an outlet here since prewar days. Now she's following in Dior footsteps, tapping another golden lode, the wholesale market.

The United States wholesale market is to the coutourier what syndication is to a columnist—a handy way of making more money for dishing out the same stuff, and both struggle to success by the same methods—something really good to sell and considerable adroit publicity.

MADAME SCHIAPARELLI'S wholesale collection consists of some forty numbers which will be sold only in the snappiest stores in most of our large cities. In her early coutourier days, Schiaparelli hit fashion headlines with some eccentric gadgets—fancy zippers, football shoulders, horse blanket tweeds, eye-compelling tones like shocking pink.

Though these items were lapped up by magazines, only the sartorially self-assured dared buy them. The collection backbone was handsome dresses those less physically well endowed could wear and comfortably get away with.

The Schiaparelli wholesale collection, which for the most part consists of suits, coats, very few dresses, is cut to this pattern and beamed toward women yearning for French creations but unable to get to Paris. Zippers are almost zero.

The new color launched is a winey purple "forbidden fruit," and toned down eccentricities consist of evening gowns with separate brassieres which not only show but are embroidered in high fantasy; dresses with either wrap-around skirts or all over strapping once so popular with history's best dressed mummies.

ELSA SCHIAPARELLI'S admirers and friends are especially pleased with the new collection because in the past few years she has had a tough time.

Everyone knows how Schiaparelli started—knitting sweaters—but not so many know that her postwar struggle was even more difficult. Sad Madame Schiaparelli refuged here doing war work, and because creating luxuries seemed inappropriate, refused all enticements to design. The profits of her Paris dressmaking house—such as they were—all went to her employes who, after all, had to work to eat even under German occupation.

Though the Schiaparelli perfumeries buzzed along, back in Paris her designing flair had not been entirely recaptured and after a series of mediocre collections she also lost her business. Her publicity was bad and other newer coutouriers were rising fast. Something drastic had to be done for herself and her 400 employes, many of whom had worked with her for years.

She launched a strenuous, very personal campaign for publicity— going everywhere, parties, balls, concerts, anywhere she would be seen and photographed. For instance within a week or so during the May-June season in Paris, Schiaparelli made an entree at a assortment of fancy dress balls dressed in a weird variety of costumes

MME. ELSA SCHIAPARELLI
. . . Taps The Golden Lode

—a popular song, a radish, a mineral queen.

It was all pretty exhausting; not too much fun for a woman who put in a hard day's work at business. However, the effort paid off—the Schiaparelli name bobbed up in every paper and magazine—her collections regained their old-time zip—and, of course, the 400 plus employes kept their jobs.

MADAME SCHIAPARELLI herself has an astringent tongue which makes her stimulating company. She has very very definite dislikes, expresses them with thorough and very sour conviction.

Her house on the Rue de Berri is lots of fun and is reminiscent of the overstuffed rooms the Collier brothers lived and died in. It's a lovely welter of beautiful furniture, leopard skins thrown on sofas, ostrich plumes under glass, flexible fish crystal chandeliers, a piano weighted with piles of sheet music, tables cluttered with small oddments some priceless, some trash. In the front vestibule is a chair—still upholstered after years—made of horrendous buffalo horns.

Recently Elsa bought a small house in Africa in Tunisia near Hammamet and right on the ocean. For relaxation, incidentally, she crochets with a thick needle, even thicker wool and in terrifying colors which somehow, because she chooses them look marvelous together.

It's nice to have Madame wholesaling and inserting Main Street matrons into mummy winding sheets and separate bras.

Embassy Reception Follows Thornton–Coates Wedding

A reception at the New Zealand Embassy followed the wedding Saturday of Miss Josephine Gwendolyn Coates and John William Thornton. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Marjorie Coates of Matakohe, New Zealand, and the late J. G. Coates, a former Prime Minister of New Zealand. The Ambassador of New Zealand, Sir Carl Berendsen, who is an old friend of the Coates family, came down from New York to give the bride in marriage, and later, with Lady Berendsen, to give the reception at the Embassy.

The ceremony took place in St. Gabriel's Church. The bride wore a traditional gown of satin with fingertip veil of old rose point lace, and she carried a bouquet of white roses. Her sister, Mrs. Lincoln P. Bloomfield, was matron of honor, and the best man was the bridegroom's cousin, George Van Echop, of Charlotte, N. C.

The bride was educated at the Marsden Diocesan School in Wellington, New Zeeland, and the bridegroom, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Harney Thornton of Washington, who has just completed his degree at Washington University.

Dashing Accessories For Your 'Basic Black'

By Peggy Preston

IMAGINATION plays a highly important role in fashion. If you employ it in planning your wardrobe, you save yourself time and money; earn a reputation for chic and sophistication.

Lilly Dache, internationally known designer, believes that all women can be well dressed if they use at least as much imagination as money in selecting their clothes. In her collection for this season she proves that one dress may become three costumes with the addition or subtraction of certain accessories.

In the accompanying pictures she shows you what can be done with a single, basic black frock. By adding belts, cummerbunds, boleros, three entirely different ensembles are created. You probably own a "little black" dress yourself. Take it out of the closet and try some of these accessory ideas. See if you, too, have the imagination to be thrifty in fashion.

"Around the World" is the title of the sheath dress of black silk crepe which Miss Dache uses as the base for the two costumes shown here. They may be worn as cocktail dresses, or short dinner gowns.

In the picture at the right the designer has added a black taffeta sash with a huge bow and an Andalusian bolero of white satin, embroidered with jet and soutache.

The Andalusian idea is advanced again by Miss Dache in the accessories that make a costume from the basic black dress below. The cummerbund is of mauve satin, and the bolero is of gold satin, with gold and black embroidery.

Luncheons, Dinners to Fete Defense Leaders Meeting Here

THE week's social schedule is filled with official luncheons and dinners, as all the Atlantic Pact nations are to be represented at the defense meeting being held tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. at the Pentagon. Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson will give the first large dinner this evening, and he will entertain again at a reception on Friday at Fort Lesley J. McNair.

Brooke Claxton, Minister of Defense for Canada, will be honored at a stag dinner party at the Canadian Embassy tomorrow evening given by the Ambassador, Hume Wrong. And today the Danish Military Attache, Maj. Gen. C. C. J. Forslev, and the Danish Naval Attache, Commodore Frits Aage Hammer Kjoelsen, are entertaining at a luncheon at the Army-Navy Town Club for their Minister of Defense, Rasmus Hansen. The latter is accompanied by Maj. Gen. E. Moeller and Comdr. Louis Jensen.

Officials from the U. S. Army, Navy and Air Force and foreign military and naval attaches will be guests at today's luncheon.

On Thursday, dinners will be given by the British Ambassador and Lady Franks and the Belgian Ambassador, Baron Silvercruys. The Belgian Counselor, Pierre Jaspar, will give a dinner, and the Belgian Military Attache, Count Yvan Du Monceau, will give a cocktail party.

The following Ministers of Defense are expected to attend tomorrow's meeting: Albert Deveze of Belgium, Brooke Claxton of Canada, Rasmus Hansen of Denmark, Paul Ramadier of France, A. V. Alexander of Great Britain, Rodolfo Pacciadi of Italy, W. F. Schmokking of the Netherlands and J. C. Hauge of Norway.

Thor Thors, Icelandic Minister, will represent his country at the meeting; Ambassador of Portugal, Theotonio Pereira, will represent his country, and Joseph Bech, Foreign Minister of Luxembourg, will represent that country.

Grown Daughter Tells Mother She Hates Her And Always Has, Yet Mother Loyally Brought Her Up Unaided After Father Deserted Them

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband deserted me when my daughter was three and one-half years old. He never provided for us in any way. I have always worked and I sent my daughter to the best boarding schools and camps I could afford.

I have always tried to be a good, understanding and sympathetic mother, and have spared nothing in my power to help Janice all through her life. She is now a grown woman and she says she hates and despises me and always has.

She was always antagonistic toward me, and her actions proved she disliked me intensely; but it was only recently that she put her feelings into blunt words, adding that she did not want to see or hear from me. She has voluntarily taken psychiatric treatment for the past four years.

Should I accept the situation and try not to let it break me completely? Or should I keep looking for a solution to the problem? Is it completely abnormal for children to hate their parents, or is it the result of some failure on the parent's part? I shall greatly appreciate your thoughts on this matter that is ruining my life. E. V.

Neurotics Make Much of "Hating"

DEAR E. V.: In the field of psychiatry there is an ubiquitous theory that (1) all acutely neurotic patients "hate" one or both parents with a lethal intensity never consciously faced; (2) that much of the morbid anxiety which warps their life and brings them to the specialist has to do with this undertow and its associated guilt-tensions; and (3) that sooner or later the patient must fetch the cat out of the bag, in order to begin to get better.

Also, in the field of analysis there is growing awareness amongst seasoned specialists that a bumbling practitioner's speculative ideas or hinted theories about a patient's ailments, in a given case, may be "picked up" by the patient, inferentially, with the result that the patient oft begins to "sound off" (spontaneously, he thinks) along lines that the specialist had "anticipated" he might; or even to bring in dreams that constitute "supporting evidence" of what the doctor had been bruiting.

In view of this secondary communication between doctor and patient, to which the latter sometimes responds puppetlike, you can see how vitally important to successful psychiatric therapy is sensitive intelligence, scrupulous integrity and mature vocational wisdom in the doctor. And I wonder if Janice has had these benefits from those who've contributed to her four years' "treatment?" Her belated volleys of outspoken hate at you raise some doubts about it.

Inasmuch as Janice is a grown woman, able to secure psychiatric care and sufficiently sane to recognize her need of it. I say bluntly that her perniciously hateful hostility toward you is her problem at this point,—not your problem, nor a supposed cause for self-reproach over which you should break your heart.

Sign of Thwarted Impulse to Love

THWARTING of the impulse to love, or frustration of the desire to be loved, may cause love-feelings to boil down to a sense of outrage—as witness the old saying, "Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned." And such transmutation of feeling probably overtook Janice in her earliest life-experience, even before her father deserted,—for I notice you say you've always worked, hence of course couldn't wholly "mother" her infant needs.

Later, as this babyhood exasperation was followed by a considerable span of psysical separation, when you sent her to boarding schools and camps, Janice probably came to imagine, and still continues to feel, that she "hates and despises you and always has." But very likely the crux of her distemper, is and always has been, that unconsciously she wants emotional closeness to you and doesn't know how to negotiate it.

As I see the picture, her fixated infantile outrage, which she won't let go, is a static hinderance to loving relatedness on the adult level; and perhaps your cringing solicitude nowadays tends to heighten her dudgeon. So for advice, if she and her doctor can't get better results on her part, try to accept her ingratitude with benevolent detachment and don't let it break your spirit.

Herbs in Chicken Gravy

Dried herbs are delicious in chicken gravy; use parsley flakes, a little rosemary or basil, and a small piece of bay leaf.

Keep in Refrigerator

Milk used for cooking should be measured and the container holding the rest of the milk returned at once to the refrigerator.

Keep Lunch Box Fresh

One important feature of the boxed lunch is the immaculate condition of the lunch box itself. It should be washed daily in warm soapsuds, scalded and aired overnight. Then it can accumulate no stale odors that take away from the enjoyment of the lunch.

Hard Cooked Eggs

In hard-cooking eggs stir them several times during the cooking process, since this is thought to be an aid in centering the yolks.

How to Enrich Color of Bricks

We have just moved into a new house and I am anxious to discover the secret of developing a red, shiny look on the bricks in our fireplace. At present their appearance is very discouraging in spite of having been waxed; they are still a whitish pink. B. P. A.

You can darken and enrich the color of the bricks somewhat by giving them a soaking coat of raw linseed oil. Before this is applied, the wax must be completely removed by scrubbing with washing soda and water or by wiping with a solvent such as varsol.

Because colors of bricks vary so much, I suggest you try the linseed oil on a small spot first to see if it will give the color you want. If the oil doesn't make the color deep enough you could use a stain on them. Perhaps adding a little color-in-oil to the linseed oil will deepen them enough. Color-in-oil can be purchased at paint stores. When the bricks have dried thoroughly, wax them to give them a shine.

Would you be so kind as to answer a few questions concerning the advisability of dressmaking with nylon yard goods? Although ads claim it doesn't need ironing, would pressing hurt the fabric if one wanted more crispness? Will a variety of weaves (like jacquard, faille, moire, etc.) be on the market in the next few months? Will these be washable, too? Is the material firm enough for flared skirts, or would the bias tend to sag more than other fabrics? Does nylon resist wrinkling as well when being worn as it is reputed to do when packed? Is it easy to handle, using a sewing machine? N. T.

Nylon can be pressed with an iron which is set to the same temperature used to iron rayons, with no harm to the fabric.

Each month new nylon fabrics appear on store counters. Right now you will find combination fabrics of nylon and silk, rayon or cotton available. These fabrics have the washing characteristics of nylon, but the feel and appearance of fabrics made of rayon, silk, or cotton. Also, they drape and handle more easily in home sewing than all nylon fabrics.

Nylon combined with other fibers can be purchased in flannel, gabardine, seersucker and challis. Additional ones are coming on the market constantly.

One of the outstanding characteristics of nylon is its resistance to stretching or sagging. However, since fabrics made of all nylon are inclined to be stiff and do not drape well, if you wish full skirts perhaps you should choose one of the combination nylon fabrics instead of all nylon.

Nylon does resist wrinkles when worn as well as when packed. In this connection, it should be mentioned that some of the combination nylon fabrics are not as resistant to wrinkling as the all-nylon fabrics. So check this before buying.

Fabrics made of all-nylon are slippery and not as easy to sew upon as cottons or some rayons. However, if you pin a turkish towel over the table part of your machine and baste all seams before stitching, you should have no trouble.

The walls of our stall shower are made of plaster which has peeled badly. Will you please tell me the method of refinishing and painting the walls after the plaster has been repaired, so they will be waterproof? L. R. G.

If you will paint the walls with a high grade enamel it will make them waterproof. Be sure the plaster in the wall is completely dry before painting and apply two coats, allowing the first to dry thoroughly before putting on the last.

PETUNIA!

Posing for a snapshot
Is a duty I abhor.
I'd rather do a washing,
Or scrub the kitchen floor!

But you'd like the results better, Petunia, if you wouldn't face the camera squarely. Turn your body at an angle, keeping your face toward the camera, and you'll look slimmer.

Keep in Trim

Apply the Science of Nutrition; Slim Down on 3 Meals a Day

By Ida Jean Kain

NO WONDER men claim they cannot understand women. When it comes to reducing diets, I can't understand either. Why do they regard it as de rigueur to suffer through semi-starvation, faddy fare, when they could apply the science of nutrition and eat to slim down on three meals a day?

Why in the name of sweet reason do they insist on giving up breakfast, when by eating breakfast they would have more energy and lose weight just as fast if not faster?

Come lunchtime, like as not they subsist on salad, thin toast and tea with lemon when they could have a balanced slimming lunch and reduce. Besides, when salad is ordered in a restaurant it comes loaded with calories in the dressing.

I can appreciate that women like to talk about diet. And of course they like a diet with conversational appeal. But the facts about scientific dieting are sensational enough to hold an audience spellbound.

Protein Keeps You Going

INTERESTED? Well, doesn't it seem like pure magic that you can actually reduce faster on a diet high in protein than on the same number of calories but with less protein? And all without going hungry, or getting tired? The dynamic facts are these: Protein has a speed-up effect on the body so that more calories are burned. And usually this stimulating effect results in increased vigor. Protein has staying power so that you do not get hungry between meals. The energy carry-over of protein is such that by including an egg or two at breakfast, energy carries over into the afternoon even when a light lunch is eaten.

A small amount of carbohydrate in the daily menu helps to burn the fat clean. So why not include some bread and potato, other vegetables and fruits so that the tissue burned will be fatty tissue?

Calories are cut through the fats, for there is ample fat in the excess pounds. The trick is to trim all fat from meat, avoid gravy and rich desserts, go light on salad dressings, butter and cream, and use skim milk or buttermilk in place of whole milk. To make up for the Vitamin A lost by restricting dairy fats, supplement the menu with one Vitamin A & D capsule daily.

When it is possible to eat and be fit instead of fat, will you tell me why women fall for fatty diets? If anyone can explain this quirk in feminine nature, won't you please let me in on the secret? I confess I don't know . . .

Greenbelt Elects First Woman Mayor

A slim brunette accepted the Greenbelt mayor's gavel last night and became the city's first woman mayor.

Mrs. Harrington

Mrs. Elizabeth T. Harrington, 46, a member of Greenbelt City Council for the past two years, was unanimously voted into the office by her fellow council members at their meeting in the Greenbelt City Hall.

Residents packed the chamber while the council followed its custom of electing as mayor the council member receiving the highest vote in the election. Mrs. Harrington polled 790 votes, or 80 percent, of the 977 cast in the election held September 20.

The new mayor told those present she had not sought the responsibility but that she would attempt to fill it with as "much efficiency and dignity" as former Mayor Canning.

Mrs. Harrington, mother of two youngsters, aged 9 and 11, is a former teacher at the Mississippi State College for Women. She came to Greenbelt with her husband, Wells Harrington, a Navy Department employe, in 1942.

In addition to her two years on the council she has served as first vice president of the Maryland State Congress of Parent-Teachers Associations and was president of the Greenbelt Council of P-T As.

The new mayor set next Monday night for the first business meeting of the council.

The Family Scrapbook

Spoiling or Something Else?

A letter received some little time ago from a Washington, D. C., grandmother raises a very interesting question. Here's the situation she described:

Her daughter was expecting another baby and, in order to have things run smoothly, arranged for the paternal grandparents to take her four-year-old boy off her hands long enough so that she could be at home for several weeks with the new baby. When finally the four-year-old returned, he whined, fussed and showed other behavior which made this Washington grandmother feel that he had been spoiled by the other grandparents.

Though her interpretation may possibly be sound, it seems much more likely that the child's behavior was brought about by a feeling that he had been entirely displaced at home by the new arrival. Not only was a "shipped" away before his baby brother arrived but did not return until mother had settled down for some time with baby brother. He could only feel that he was being pushed out.

The behavior described arises more frequently out of feelings of being rejected than it does from so-called "spoiling."

Hutterites' Happiness Under Study

By The Associated Press

What makes the Hutterites so remarkably happy and sane?

The Public Health Service yesterday gave Wayne University, Detroit, $19,364 to try to find the answer to that question.

"The Hutterites are a small religious sect noted for their superior degree of social harmony and individual adjustment," the service said in announcing the grant.

"The purpose of the study will be to find the factors which are chiefly responsible for their high degree of mental health."

The sect, also called the Hutterian Brethren, was founded in Moravia in 1533. Under persecution, groups migrated to Hungary, Russia and—in 1874—to South Dakota.

Dr. Joseph W. Eaton, Wayne University sociology instructor, will be in charge of the project.

The Health Service approved 11 other grants for mental health research.

The Lyon's Den

ABOARD THE "SOUTHERN CROSS": This is an undatelined column, from a Clipper somewhere over the Pacific. The 33 passengers not only don't know the right time but also what day this really is. Aboard this Pan American Stratocruiser whose inaugural flight is shrinking 2500 miles off the Pacific by cutting eight hours from the regular flying time, no two watches give the same reading. Four stricken ones with calendar watches which they fear to turn back lest the intricate works be impaired, remain at New York time; five are at San Francisco time, seven at Honolulu time and two visionaries are at Tokyo hour. The rest have just given up.

It was Friday, last night in Honolulu, and today is Sunday; for somewhere during the night we crossed the international date line and lost Saturday—an event made even more unique by the fact that daylight saving time ended at 2 a. m. of a vanished morning in a day whose light or dark we never saw. Mrs. Dennis McEvoy, flying to join her husband in Tokyo, regretted only her inability to make the Pacific crossing one day sooner. "As long as I'm to lose a day, I'd rather it be a Friday," Mrs. McEvoy said, "because I hate fish." Jewish passengers lost the day on which the New Year was to be celebrated. I also lost my eldest son's birthday.

And while, from the flight-deck, comes the Sunday broadcast of the football games being played at this very moment on Saturday in California — the memories of the past few hours become telescoped . . . The rush to LaGuardia Field, with Walter Winchell at the wheel, to catch the plane for California . . . the flight across the broad land . . . and then the walk through San Francisco's Chinatown with William Saroyan, who has such tender regard for the theater that the worst he would say of a bad play is, "It is not irresistible" . . . And seeing Frankie Hyers in "High Button Shoes"—Hyers, who worked at the 18 Club, now razed and become part of Rockefeller Center. "John D. will make more dough out of it than we did," Hyers sighed, "but he'll never get the laughs we got."

Group to Hold Quiz On Human Relations

The Biosophical Institute, a discussion group whose purpose is development of friendship and character, will hold a quiz on human relationships at 8 p. m. Wednesday in Room 11, Willard Hotel.

On Friday, same time and place, the institute will feature a review of "The Mature Mind," a book by Harry A. Overstreet, according to Mrs. Lillian M. Mark, secretary.

DOCTOR MENTALCASE TOLD UNCLE ELBY YOU HAD TO BE AN ARTIST, NAPOLEON, SO YOU COULD EXPRESS YOURSELF AND NOT GET YOUR INFERIORITY COMPLEX BACK.

What's the Verdict

THE DOMESTIC SCENE

Q. A wife sued for divorce in State X, where she had established residence for divorce purposes. Her husband, opposing the divorce, answers her suit by showing that she previously had sued him in another State, asking a divorce for cruelty, and that after a trial she had been denied a divorce. He argues that the court of State X therefore ought not to hear her suit, as it already had been decided in another State. Is he correct?

A. The "full faith and credit" clause of the United States Constitution requires one State to recognize the judicial acts of another State when the other State has had jurisdiction of the case. Here, if the suit in State X was based on the same alleged acts of cruelty which had been brought in evidence in the earlier trial, and those acts only, the wife's case should be dismissed, under the "full faith and credit" clause. But if new acts of cruelty are alleged, or new acts added to the previous ones, State X can hear her complaint anew. Thus, one trial resulting unfavorably to the wife could not forever bar her from seeking divorce under new circumstances.—F. L. D.

Reluctant Donnie

Whenever we send Donnie to . . . The local grocery . . . His look of anguish clearly shows . . . He goes reluctantly . . . And usually his voice reveals . . . In no uncertain tone . . . That we are taking up the time . . . That ought to be his own . . . But when some neighbor calls and has . . . An errand to be done . . . Our Donnie bursts into a smile . . . And really starts to run . . . He loves his mother and his dad . . . And he is kind and good . . . And yet sometimes he seems more glad . . . To serve the neighborhood . . . Of course it is just possible . . . That he enjoys the trip . . . Because he knows the neighbor will . . . Reward him with a tip.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Palooka, Canyon, Terry On Radio Today

My radio program this afternoon will be worth listening to (for a change).

My guests will include one Pulitzer Prize winner and six pixies.

The prize winner is Herblock, our editorial cartoonist. The six pixies are some of The Washington Post's ace comic strip artists. To wit:

Milton Caniff (Steve Canyon), Ham Fisher (Joe Palooka), George Wunder (Terry and the Pirates), Bill Holman (Smokey Stover), Ken Ernst (Mary Worth) and Lank Leonard (Mickey Finn).

I love working with these guys. All I have to say is "Welcome to the program," and "It's been nice having you." They fill in everything in between.

Unlike Sheriff Finn, Leonard is a truly witty Irishman. Caniff and Wunder are world-famous for their snappy dialogue, and Ernst also gives a good account of himself in these round table free-for-alls.

But Palooka Fisher and Smokey Holman are possibly the fastest quipsters of the lot. With them it's a sort of private game. The first one who needs more than two seconds to think of an answering wisecrack is a sissy.

So if you're not doing anything between 1:30 and 2 this afternoon, tune in and meet my neighbors in the comic strips.

OVERHEARD

Newsboy at 14th st. and New York ave. Sunday night: "There's no joy in Boston; read all about the Yankees."

SANITATION (?) DEPT.

James Schwartz of 1107 Staples st. ne. says lipstick on restaurant glasses is revolting enough—but it's the least of our troubles.

"Butchers with dirty hands . . . the bread man and the cheese man who handle food and make change with filthy bills . . . the flies that hold family picnics on the things we eat . . . ugh! It's repugnant."

I know what you mean, Jim. Whenever I complain about flies on exposed food, people regard me as a crackpot.

Modern medical science has accomplished just about everything except to instill in the average American a healthy fear of germs, and of the flies, insects and rodents which spread them.

NOW FOR FOOTBALL

On the opening day of the baseball season, I publish my pennant selections in the two major leagues; when the season is over, I usually have to hang my head in shame when I reprint them.

This year I picked the Boston Red Sox in the American League and the Brooklyn Dodgers in the National.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Fine black male cat, 6 months old, housebroken; the management says either he goes or we go." (Ordway 6421.)

"Several kittens, half-Siamese." (Oliver 7691, evenings.)

"Seven-month-old male Maltese cat with four white feet; we're leaving for Florida." (Overlook 1586.)

"Three kittens, two black, one gray." (Shepherd 8082.)

"Five adorable 2-month-old kittens, three females and two males." (Sligo 7260, evenings.)

"Affectionate 8-month-old black-and-white puppy; her mother was a Samoyed." (Sligo 2918, evenings.)

"Two gray and white male kittens, 6 weeks old; also one white mouse in a fancy cage." (Wisconsin 3379.)

"Stray puppy; brown and white, evidently part beagle, housebroken, excellent pet." (Chestnut 0301.)

KID STUFF

Mrs. R. H. Adams of 101 Fairhaven ave., Alexandria, Va., has a 7-year-old son who gives promise of growing up into a District Liner, if he's not careful.

The lad was out riding in a home-made "airplane" the other day. (A box, two roller skates and a long board.)

A little neighbor girl stood by, watching admiringly, obviously getting set to ask the inevitable question. So our young aviator asked:

"Wanna fly?"

"Oh, yes," exclaimed the girl.

"Wait a minute," replied her hero, "and I'll catch one for you."

PERSONAL NOTES

Walter C. Fisher, 3517 A st. se.: Your guess is right. The same information was supplied by another reader in last Saturday's editions. How come you miss our fine paper on Saturday?

VAGRANT THOUGHT

Sonny and Cupcake (in the Steve Roper comic strip) couldn't go to Kit's party until they got a baby sitter.

But Mrs. Charles G. Jaquette of 36 Hawaii ave. ne. wonders who was sitting with the baby while its parents and Steve went off to investigate the baby sitting agency?

THOSE WONDROUS NATS

H. E. Behre of 3408 Cameron Mill rd., Alexandria, Va., thinks we should change the name of the local ball club from the "Nats" to the "Bums." But I'm agin' it.

In Brooklyn calling the Dodgers "Bums" is a term of endearment. Locally, it might be misunderstood.

Besides, the Nats of next season may develop into Gnats with a real sting. You might say:

They'll sure look nifty
In nineteen fifty.

Meantime, unfortunately, I must remind you that:

A cellar tenant
Can't win the pennant.

IT'S A WISE SON . . .

Nate Leiderman of 1308 41st st. se. informs us:

"My two sons sleep in the same room. Each one always knows which side his brother is bedded on."

Wonder if Nate has the same schoolday problem as other fathers: Waiting for the son to rise.

DIRTY DIG

My story about the reporter who was covering the Nats brings a tart comment from Rand Smith of 1426 21st st. nw. Rand says:

"After the performance they gave this year, 'covering them' is all that's left to be done. I'll volunteer as a pallbearer."

As Wondrous Herb Heft might put it: Wait till next year.

"Whew! Who locked me up in that thing?"

Pope 'Confident' Of World Peace . .

Rome, Oct. 3 (U.P.)—Francis Cardinal Spellman, Archbishop of New York, said today Pope Pius XII was "concerned but confident" over the world's efforts to find peace.

Reporting on his audience with the Pope yesterday, the cardinal said he will have a farewell audience Thursday.

Death and Dearth of Career Men

By Drew Pearson

Ray Wakefield, who had served his country long and faithfully, was found in the bathtub the other day with his wrists slashed. His death, shortly thereafter, did not provoke the same storm that followed the suicide of another high public official last spring, but it should not pass unnoticed.

Mr. Wakefield

Ray Wakefield was a Republican who had made a career of government. Beginning as a California district attorney, then as a California railroad commissioner, he worked his way up to be a Federal Communications Commissioner. Most of his adult life he spent serving his Government, and both Democrats and Republicans testified that he served it well.

When his term expired on the Federal Communications Commission in 1947, both Republican and Democratic Senators, together with the Democratic FCC chairman, recommended him for reappointment.

And he was reappointed. This particular post of the FCC had to be filled by a Republican, and President Truman sent Wakefield's name up to the Senate.

Then, one day after the President made a speech at Princeton, June, 1947, urging young men to make a career of Government service, he suddenly withdrew Wakefield's name from the Senate.

"There is a critical shortage of such men," the President had told the Princeton graduates referring to Government servants. Then he went back to Washington and killed the appointment of a man who had spent 25 faithful years in Government service.

Wakefield, just before his appointment was withdrawn, had issued a report which saved the American public $2,500,000 a year in radio and telegram rates. Because of this and his consistent championship of lower rates for the public, the big radio and communications companies didn't like him. On top of this he had ruled against giving a radio station to Speaker Sam Rayburn's nephew at Houston, Tex. Finally, Senator Bricker of Ohio, who sought a radio station at Columbus, Ohio, wanted his friend, Congressman Robert Jones of Ohio, appointed in Wakefield's place.

Jones had been elected with the support of Gerald L. K. Smith and other isolationist groups. But Wakefield's name was withdrawn and Jones was appointed in his place.

To one who had dedicated his life to Government service, who had raised a family on a skimpy Government salary, and who had tried to defend the public's interest, naturally this was pretty hard for Ray Wakefield to take. At first he figured he might practice law, then went abroad on a makeshift radio assignment. But he couldn't sleep at night and he kept looking back at all those 25 years spent trying to work his way up from a young deputy district attorney in Fresno, Calif., then as a tax appraiser, then on to Washington—always working for the public.

And so, with no one particularly left to work for, Ray passed away last week. He was taken to no Government hospital. His funeral will not be held in State. But his death will be mourned by many little people who knew Ray Wakefield as a friend of man.

Petite Anne Alpern, noted city solicitor of Pittsburgh, Pa., gave Senators on the Interstate Commerce Committee a piece of her nimble mind the other day.

Testifying on the stymied reappointment of Leland Olds, liberal Federal Power Commissioner, the lady lawyer from Pittsburgh asked, in effect, whether the committee was taking orders from the American people or from the private gas-and-oil lobby which is so vehemently fighting Olds' confirmation.

The big gas companies, Miss Alpern asserted, were against Olds because he opposed legislation exempting them from Federal rate regulation.

"I'm not concerned about the fate of one man," testified Miss Alpern, "but I am concerned about the fate of American consumers. We cannot afford to jettison men like Leland Olds who have devoted their careers to protecting consumers. The one thing his enemies don't like about him is that they can't swerve him from his public duty."

In the very middle of a sentence Senator Lyndon (Lying-Down) Johnson of Texas, elected by those who opposed Pappy O'Daniel, but who has been veering over to Pappy's big oil-and-gas voting record, pulled a stopwatch on the lady, informed her that her time was up.

"I wasn't expecting to share my time with members of the committee, who have asked me so many questions," replied Miss Alpern, and was given a few more words.

Note—Olds is another public servant who, like Wakefield, has not been afraid to buck the big interests in favor of his fellow men.

Merry-Go-Round

Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon, confined to a wheel chair with a wrenched back, got bored with the hospital and ordered that he be wheeled into the Senate each day—to keep on the job. At the sight of Morse in his wheel chair, fellow Republican Karl Mundt of South Dakota cracked: "I don't mind you voting like FDR, but you don't have to start coming around in a wheel chair, too" . . .

A wild canary, seeking refuge from the chilly winds, somehow slipped past the guards the other day into the restricted area of the Capitol building. Last seen, the canary was perched magnificently on the expensive chandelier outside Vice President Barkley's office. (Or perhaps it was a lovebird.)
